BOSTON, MASS.

Every voter's name will be held in strict confidence. Each name will be checked for its validity.

No one may vote more than once.

In conjunction with other Hearst newspapers, the Boston Evening American today begins a nation-wide canvass of public opinion upon the prohibition issue.

This task is undertaken in the belief that, as long as the issue of prohibition is before Congress, it is desirable there shall be the widest possible expression of public opinion upon it.

ARLINGTON YOUTH'S FIANCEE IS FIRST TO LEARN HE IS GONE

Arthur D. Davis, 21-year-old theological student, son of Rev. and Mrs. Reuben J. Davis of No. 47 Park avenue, North Arlington, has been mysteriously missing for a week, it was learned today.

A country-wide search has been instituted for the youth, in the belief that he is suffering from amnesia, or has become a victim of wanderlust.

A student at Newton Theological Seminary, young Davis had complained about pains in his head and inability to concentrate, it was learned from fellow students, and had also talked of New York City, logging camps and cattle ships.

The first intimation that he had stepped aside from his customary path was received by the young man's sweetheart, a young woman of Acton, in an incoherent letter from him written at a West End Hotel.

She communicated with his parents, who telephoned the seminary and learned that their son had not appeared there Monday.

150 IN PANIC WHEN NARROW GAUGE FERRY HAS MISHAP IN HARBOR

Terrified by the sudden halting of the Narrow Gauge ferryboat Newtown in the middle of the harbor channel today, 150 men and women passengers rushed for life preservers in the belief that the boat was sinking.

Deckhands of the ferry circulated in the panic-stricken crowd, however, and assured them that stopping of the engines was merely a safety measure because a kingpin in the crossbar beam had become loose.

The kingpin that worked loose holds the walking beam high up—the beam that rocks up and down and drives the paddle wheels.

It allowed too much play in the beam which caused a pounding and which, in short order, might have allowed the pin to sheer off, completely crippling the boat.

To prevent serious damage the engines were ordered stopped as soon as the loose pin was noticed, but most of the passengers, not understanding what was back of the quick stop in progress, lost their heads.

The ferryboat crawled into her East Boston slip, where she was bound, and after the passengers were

ARLINGTON BOY PREACHER MISSING AFTER WRITING SWEETHEART

VANISHES ON WAY TO NEWTON

The father left the train there while the son was to continue to South Station, where he planned to take a train to Newton.

After his fiancee received the letter, Rev. Mr. Davis started an investigation that revealed his son had registered under his own name in the West End hotel Monday night. He left there Tuesday morning, informing the clerk he was going to the North Station. Since then he has not been heard from.

According to the clergyman, his son had only about $3 in his possession at the time he left home.

When young Davis had not turned up last Saturday night the police were notified, and broadcasted a description of him. The young man was to have preached in a Readville church yesterday.

He was a diligent student, quiet and unassuming. His father said he once worked as a counter man in a restaurant to earn money, and the police believe he may take such a job again if suffering from amnesia. Reference by him to logging camps, cattle ships and New York City led to the theory that Davis may have become obsessed with a desire to travel.

He is described as 5 feet 6 inches tall, 140 pounds in weight, of medium complexion, almost sallow, blue eyes, smooth face, sharp features, wearing tortoise shell glasses, a mixed brown and gray suit, bluish gray felt hat, black shoes, and carried a black travelling bag containing toilet articles. He wore a signet ring marked "M" said to be the initial of his sweetheart.

Palm Beach Awaits Stotesbury's 'Diamond-Set Fruit'

COLLEGE VICTORS

GOLD LEAF DINNERS NOW RAGE

Cosdens, Aspirants for Social Leadership, Start Something in Florida's Wealthy Set

Palm Beach, Fla., March 8.—And now society is wondering whether Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury won't give a big dinner at which the fruit is studded with diamonds.

It's all the rage in high society—this decorating the fruit.

Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Cosden gave a dinner a few weeks ago at which all the fruit served was coated with a gold leaf. A wonderful innovation, everybody said.

But then Mrs. Preston Pope Satterwhite gave a dinner at which the fruit was given a genuine platinum shade.

The Stotesbury's, you know, have been for years regarded as leaders of Florida society—especially in the Winter. Stotesbury is head of Drexl & Co., and his friends call him the J. P. Morgan of Philadelphia.

THEN CAME THE COSDENS.

Everybody used to come to the Stotesbury home, El Mirasol; but there were few theatrical celebrities to be found there, until this season.

Well, the Cosdens opened a palatial home in N. Ocean boulevard last season, and brought the Astors and the Vanderbilts and great writers and painters and sculptors and other lions to Palm Beach as their guests.

They had a feather in their family cap, too, because they had entertained the Prince of Wales at their little place in Long Island. And Palm Beach sat up and called them "our social leaders."

That dinner of gilt fruit sort of put a second feather in their cap. And it waved quite as proudly as the first feather, until Mrs. Satterwhite thought of platinum. Platinum is much more costly than gold.

UP TO STOTESBURYS.

Why should Mrs. Satterwhite let

Governor of Maine Seeks the Facts in Situation Revealed by Le Bar Domestic Tangles

Augusta, Me., March 8.—A State investigation of lax law enforcement conditions in Kennebec County, launched by Governor Ralph O. Brewster, got underway here today with Franklin Fisher of this city cooperating with the State police authorities as a special representative of the Governor.

Fisher is authorized to make recommendations as to changes in methods and personnel as a means of putting a curb on conditions said to exist.

Governor Brewster's investigation is a result of the charges and counter charges from various sources made in connection with the marital difficulties of Eugene S. LeBar, young millionaire, and his wife.

After LeBar filed a divorce petition against his wife, Mrs. Lebar, through High Sheriff Henry E. Cummings of Kennebec County, asked that a guardian be appointed for him, alleging he was mentally incompetent.

As stories of gay parties in this city and elsewhere began to circulate, the LeBars settled their troubles out of court, but Governor Brewster instructed State Police Chief Field to sift out reports that liquor seized by the authorities had been used at society functions.

LeBar has withdrawn charges made against his wife, while she, in withdrawing her guardianship petition, has released him from a $100,000 attachment which had been placed on his property.

R. C. Browne Hears Clearly Epoch-Making Oversea Talk; Plans on to Establish Service

Boston and Salem men and women listened in on the supposedly "strictly private" radio telephone conversations carried on for the first time in history between this country and Europe.

They were treated to participation in the epoch-making event by Ralph C. Browne of Salem, who, by using a series of interchangeable coils of his own invention, capable of receiving over a range of from 30 to 20,000 meters, picked up every word of the international test.

Relaying the wireless conversations from his radio receiving set to his telephone wires, he gave one friend after another a chance to listen in, simply by calling them on his regular telephone instrument.

On a wave length of 5,000 meters, supposedly too high for outsiders, New York talked with London for four hours, the success of the innovation being due jointly to the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., the Radio Corporation of America, and the British General Post office.

Browne, an inventor of note, listened in at his home at No. 123 Federal street, Salem, and he was amused to hear officials on one end of the New York to London air circuit assure those on the other that it was highly improbable any outsiders were participating.

The Salem man is popularly known as "the man who bottled up the U boats," by his invention for setting off sea mines.

Overseas Phone Lines Assured by Radio Test

New York, March 8 (I.N.S.).—"Hello, Central, give me London." This, as an ordinary request in the not distant future, was eagerly discussed by people of New York today, following establishment of the first two-way radio telephone communication across the Atlantic in history last night.

For four hours forty American newspaper men, in the American Telephone & Telegraph Company's experimental station here, chatted individually and informally with as many of their colleagues in London.

The transmission was as clear, or

DIOGENES, DON'T WORRY! LOOK AT SOMERVILLE!

Diogenes missed Somerville.

The city is filled with honest folk. At police headquarters there are now three gold watches picked up on the street by honest citizens and awaiting claimants, also a purse containing a small amount of money.

Thirteen-year-old Gladys Mercer, No. 17 Belmont street, started the wave of honesty last September when she turned in a lady's handbag and $4.42. Since that time nobody had claimed the bag so Chief of Police Kendall gave it to the little girl today.

But the watches were picked up last week.

P. P. Shirley of No. 62 Highland avenue picked up the first watch and handed it over to Traffic Officer Sharry on duty at Union square. Sharry thought it was raining watches when, a little later, Heta Barcherry of Somerville avenue, walked up and handed him a second gold watch.

Meanwhile, at the other end of the town, Patrolman Pierce was presented with a gold watch by Frank A. Howard of No. 27 Brastow avenue. Howard had picked it up on the street also.

The police believe some pickpocket must have thought himself under suspicion in Somerville and "ditched" his loot.

GERMAN'S INVENTION WILL CONSERVE COAL

Berlin, March 8 (A.P.)—Seeking to eliminate the tremendous consumption of coal in electric power plants, Dr. Walter Paul, electrical engineer, has devised a thermo-magnetic electric generator to supplant steam-driven turbines. It is based on the fact that the induced magnetism of soft iron decreases and increases as the temperature of the iron falls and rises. The device consists of a heavy soft iron magnetized by an electrical current. As the ring is heated by either a gas or coal fire and then allowed to cool an alternating current is induced in the wiring.

In another column the Boston Evening American publishes the ballot through which it is designed to obtain a fair, honest expression of individual opinion. Similar ballots are to be published in other Hearst newspapers, in the Middle West and on the Pacific Coast.

In the opinion of the Boston Evening American, as in that of many leaders of American life, most people, after six years of prohibition, have made up their minds as to whether prohibition has been a success or needs modification.

The ballot has been arranged in such form as to bring forth the real belief of the individual who uses it. It seeks light, particularly on the following questions:

Company does not affect the interstate traffic between the terminal points named.

MRS. FERDINAND IS BRIDE OF V. A. HEATH

Friends of Mrs. Anna Sinclair Ferdinand, widow of the founder of New England's oldest furniture stores, and Victor Arnold Heath, manager and treasurer of Frank Ferdinand, Inc., of Roxbury, will find announcement of the couple's marriage at Atlantic City in their mail today.

"Victor Arnold Heath and Mrs. Anna Sinclair Ferdinand announce their marriage on Saturday, January 30, 1926, at Atlantic City," is all the information these engraved announcements will contain.

But these few words will reveal a romance that has grown out of many years of friendship.

At the bride's home at No. 84 Crowninshield road, Brookline, friends will be informed that "Mrs. Ferdinand is away for some time." At Mr. Heath's apartment at No. 128 Sewall avenue, Brookline, they will learn he also is away.

SPEEDING WEST.

Mr. Heath and his bride are speeding west to California. They left here Saturday, after mailing the announcements of their wedding. None of their friends had any inkling of the romance, and none of the relatives of either would discuss it.

The marriage is Mrs. Heath's third. While still in her teens she was married to Alfred Anderson of Dorchester. Seven years later she obtained a divorce. When she was 26 (she is now 37) she was married to Frank Ferdinand, who at the time was 75. Her maiden name was Sinclair, and her father, George B. Sinclair, was known throughout the country as the inventor of the "choralcelo," a musical instrument similar to an organ.

CONTROLS FIRM.

Mr. Heath has been connected with the Ferdinand firm for many years. He and the former Mrs. Ferdinand have known each other for years. Practically the entire control of the store is in his hands.

Mr. Heath also is known as one of the most public spirited citizens in Roxbury.

N. Y. COPS CLUB AND SEIZE FUR STRIKERS

General Roundup Follows the Breaking Up of 500 in Demonstration

New York, March 8 (A. P.)—A platoon of police, some mounted and others using clubs, dispersed 500 striking fur workers today when they attempted to hold a demonstration on Seventh avenue.

Sixteen of the strikers were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct. Several strikers were hit by the police clubs, but none was seriously injured.

After being dispersed the workers retired to two union halls, where they held indignation meetings.

The disturbance was the first of any importance since 12,000 fur workers in more than 2,000 shops went on strike February 16, after some of the employers had ordered a lockout.

The workers struck for a forty-four-hour week, equal distribution of work throughout the year and an unemployment fund to guard against seasonal layoffs.

Union officials had announced that about 20 shops had acceded to the workers' demands and that work would be resumed in those shops this week.

Among those arrested is Benjamin Gold, manager of the New York joint board of furriers, and one of the strike leaders.

After dispersing the main group the police industrial squad followed the strikers and made many more arrests in the lower Manhattan fur district between Twenty-third and Twenty-eighth streets from Sixth to Seventh avenues. They were taken away in police patrol wagons.

IRISH CLUBS TO PLAY BIG PART IN PARADE

Societies From Various Sections to March in Evacuation Day Procession

By JAMES WALSH.

Men of Irish birth or extraction from all over the Eastern part of the State will take part in the parade in observance of Evacuation Day, March 17, in South Boston. Several hundred delegates of various Irish societies yesterday attended a meeting of the general and executive committees of the Associated American Irish Societies in John Boyle O'Reilly Hall, Hibernian Building, and further perfected plans in connection with the demonstration.

District chairmen in the various districts have called special meetings to be held during this week. The Brighton contingent reported that it will have a large delegation in line, headed by the St. Columbkille's cadet band and cadet corps. The Charlestown district will have a special meeting on Thursday evening in Hibernian Hall, Union street. This district includes Revere, East Boston and Everett.

The Dorchester district chairman will preside at a public meeting to be held in Arcadia Hall on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. William H. O'Brien will address the meeting. The Roxbury district will meet in Hibernian Hall, Dudley street, on Wednesday evening. This district also includes the Back Bay and South End. The Gaelic Athletic Association reported that its members would be in line, headed by the Irish Pipers' band of Boston.

Chairman Richard Dwyer announced that a special meeting of the delegates representing districts which are to have historic floats in the march will be held in Hibernian Building tomorrow night. The purpose is to co-ordinate the work of selecting suitable floats.

Bartholomew J. Fahey, president of the County Galway Men's Association, presided at a meeting that filled oJhn Boyle O'Reilly Hall, Hibernian Building, last night. Several matters of importance were discussed including the proposed memorial church to Father Michael Griffin in his native Galway. Members of the association are planning a visit to their old homes in Ireland next June, under the leadership of Peter J. Mahon, past president of the County Galway Club, and a member of the board of trustees of the Central Council of Irish County Associations. The proposed date of sailing is June 27 by the Cunarder Laconia.

James H. Phelan, president of the County Waterford Association, was the principal speaker at a meeting of the County Galway Ladies' Association last night in Sarsfield Hall, Hibernian Building, Roxbury. Mrs. Nora Kelly Foley, presided. Mr. Phelan outlined the plans for the unveiling of the monument to Vincent Wallace in Waterford City this Spring. President Foley announced that William C. Prout, supreme trustee of the Knights of Columbus and prominent Boston attorney, will address the members at their next meeting, to be held on Easter Sunday night.

HUSBAND RACES TO POLLS WITH VOTE FOR WIFE

Speeding northward on a crack train is Roger W. Cutler, war "ace" and famous Harvard oarsman, in an exciting race to the Needham polls to cast his vote for his wife, Leslie B. Cutler, for re-election to the board of selectmen.

Not even the fact that he indorsed the candidacy of Winthrop M. Southworth, his wife's rival in the election, can dim Cutler's enthusiasm. He is confident of her victory at the polls today.

Mrs. Cutler's trials have been many in her fight for re-election for a third consecutive term. First there was the bitter discussion which arose between residents of Neholden street, Needham's most exclusive thoroughfare, and Mrs. Cutler, who is chairman of the board.

Residents claimed she wanted to cut down 76 shade trees as well as slice away a large part of their front lawns to widen the street. When this dispute was finally ironed out, there arose another controversy over a tract of land known as "no man's land." Mrs. Cutler wanted to take it for highway purposes.

"A woman must sacrifice something in politics," says Mrs. Cutler, the mother of four children and stepmother to a fifth. "She can't keep up a society racket or play bridge. She's got to give up something.

DISCOVER EARTH'S 88TH CHEMICAL ELEMENT

Urbana, Ill., March 8 (A.P.)—Discovery of one of the five unknown chemical elements was announced today by the University of Illinois, the work of Dr. B. S. Hopkins, professor of inorganic chemistry, assisted by L. F. Yatema and J. A. Harris of the chemical staff.

It is the first time such a discovery ever has been made in this country.

The new element is known in the chemistry world as No. 61. Eighty-seven of the possible ninety-two simple substances that make up all compounds that exist previously had been isolated and identified.

The last previous discovery was that of hanium, announced in Copenhagen in 1923.

Many elements, such as gold, silver, mercury, iron, copper, lead and the like, were known to the ancients, but others are more modern in discovery.

THOUSANDS ARE DELAYED BY RAIL TIEUP

Derailed New Haven Car Blocks Dorchester Trains as Crowds Jam Stations

Thousands of commuters on the New Haven Railroad were delayed today when a derailed freight car dealt traffic over the road the worst blow it has suffered since the last big snowstorm.

The derailment occurred near Harvard street station, Dorchester on the inbound track, a broken truck frame throwing a set of car wheels off the rails.

Two heavily used Dorchester locals in the morning rush-hour were cancelled as a result of the tie-up, leaving hundreds of commuters to pack their way into through trains or get in town as best they could by other means.

Way stations in Dorchester and beyond were jammed with waiting patrons.

Except for five trains from Norwood and points further along the line, which were routed into the South Station over the outbound tracks, traffic was at a standstill. These trains arrived at the terminal from ten to twenty-seven minutes late packed with humanity.

Outbound traffic was discontinued while the rush-hour was on, with a wrecking crew working desperately against time to place the derailed freight car back on the tracks. Although the accident happened at 5 a. m., the tracks could not be cleared for hours.

Commuters hardest hit were those using the Bird street, Mt. Bowdoin, Upham's corner, Harvard street and Dorchester stations.

Trade With Germany Grows

N. Y. FACTORY WORKERS AVERAGE $30.85 A WEEK

New York, March 8 (I.N.S.).—Factory workers in New York earned an average of $30.85 a week, January, according to figures made public today by the Industrial Bureau of the Merchants' Association. According to the figures, this is an increase of 140 per cent. since 1914.

THOUSANDS SEE THUGS IN $7,000 THEATRE HOLDUP

New York, March 8 (I.N.S.).—Invading Times square at an hour when it was thronged with people on their way to work, five armed thugs overpowered a night watchman at the stage entrance of the George M. Cohan Theatre today, ripped open a safe in the office and escaped with receipts estimated at between $6,000 and $7,000.

MOTHER'S DAY FOR HEALTH BUILDING

Today is Mother's Day for the mothers who wish to take advantage of the invitation of the Boston Evening American and join other mothers in a series of exercises and health drills.

At half past two, at the John J. Williams Gymnasium, Brookline street and Shawmut avenue, an instructor from the Boston Park Department will be on hand to take all the ladies on their trip through health-land, over vaults and under "horses" with special manoeuverings with the dumbbels and Indian clubs.

It's great fun, all the mothers agree. Join them and participate in an afternoon of athletic and gymnastic health building. The pleasure is all yours and you'll derive the benefits.

$100,000 GIFT TO JEWISH HOSPITAL

The call of the race sizzled in the hearts of Boston's Jewry, and in answer to the need for funds with which to complete the new Beth Israel Hospital units $400,000 was contributed at a dinner in the Copley-Plaza, which officially launched the drive for $1,000,000.

A. C. Ratshesky, the city's wealthiest Jew, electrified the guests with the announcement that his donation for himself and wife was $100,000.

It was a night of surprises. Scarcely had the enthusiasm over the Ratshesky contribution subsided when a long-bearded patriarch, a true son of Israel, arose, and with solemn tribute, offered his savings of a lifetime—$30,000.

Shopping with Priscilla Price

DEAREST ANNE:

This has been wonderful crisp weather for shopping and, my dear, every day I am seeing more and more attractive things for Spring. The shops are full of them, but I'll just tell you about a few I have seen lately.

One's First New Hat

—is most important! I always feel shabby with the clear freshness of early Spring and immediately want a new hat.

Going along Tremont St. the other day I was actually blown right into the Winchester Sports Wear Shop at the corner of West St. and, much to my surprise, was greeted by Mrs. Tuttle who has recently come to the Winchester Store, after being the manager and designer of millinery for the last 15 years in another one of Boston's smart shops. And she now has a wonderful enlarged hat department in the Winchester Store.

Her good taste and talent are shown in the models she showed to me. The street hat, smartly tailored and worn for luncheon, teas and shopping she had in all the new shapes and materials. Awfully good looking.

Two and three-tone faille hats in geometric designs are Spring successes! The crowns are high and most have narrow flattering brims. Winchester's new hat and scarf sets are stunning and only $15! I am going to get one to wear with my Spring suit. Felt trimmed with figured silk and matching scarf.

Hat ornaments are again important. And it is the angle you wear them. The place is over the ear, not the eye, through little cocardes, or holding soft folds of the felt just above the pearl earring. The Winchester Sports Apparel Shop has many fascinating hatpins or ornaments. The newest are monograms in rhinestones and not expensive. Good-looking on shoulder or handbag, too.

Do go in and see their enlarged hat department. They have just what we all want to wear now at prices to suit us all.

Roses Are Red, Violets Blue

Lady Camoys does a little morning shopping.

Do You Know That

—at Filene's they have a Dry Cleaning Department that is simply ideal? It is called the "Renova Cleansing" and I sometimes wonder how they can do such expert work at such reasonable prices.

Dry cleansing has come to be an essential part of a woman's economy, and in Filene's Renova Department you may have your soiled or

For "Miss 14 to 20"

—is an underwear section at Hovey's devoted solely to her. All types of undies for the small miss and small woman are there—on the 3rd floor just back of the Misses' Gray Shop and next to the Beauty Parlor.

Think of getting a slip that is not too long! Have you ever? Well, you can now in this department—and what is more you will find a wide variety of styles in sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20.

A wonderful one is made of crepe de chine with short circular skirt finished with piquot edged scallops. Marvelous for dancing and just the thing to wear with the new flare skirts. And, my dear, only $5.95! Beautiful lustrous quality in pink, white and green.

Pongee slips are practical for business and ordinary wear and this misses' department has them for $2.95 with hip hem and good full bloomers to match at $1.95.

Being in bed is a joy in crepe de chine pajamas like those in this misses' department. Dainty lace, embroidery and footing trimmed. Fascinating and so low priced. They carry a full line of corsets and brassieres, too, and one little corselette is awfully nice and only $1.50. Hooks up on one side, has little boning where it is needed and four garters.

Hovey's misses' underwear department is well worth a trip to the 3rd floor for the young girl or small woman who wants things made specially for her.

S. S. Pierce's Phone System

—is simply astounding. I have an awfully easy time doing my ordering from them, they always seem to know just what I want and are most courteous and well informed. I save so much time and delay. Their number is Back Bay 7600 and for the convenience of customers who have to pay an extra charge they have retained their Regent 1300 number.

It is an exploded idea that people pay more telephoning for their groceries, rather than going direct to the shop—they don't

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

English Village Portrayed at Handicrafts Exhibit in Horticultural Hall

THERE'S A QUAINT LITTLE bit of old England to be visited in Horticultural Hall this week—a tiny village street authentic in its realism and lined with those picturesque thatched-roof cottages set behind their hedges for which the English countryside has long been famous.

AS SETTING FOR a handcrafts exhibition this village street is charming as can be—and all the old-time arts may be seen, the potters and the rug-makers, the wood carvers, the weavers and lace makers, candle dippers and book binders.

THE AFFAIR IS, in fact, a most ambitious demonstration of every sort of handcraft—and for local color there will be an old apple lady with her stand and a pieman with his barrow, each costumed true to life.

NEARLY A ROUND hundred of sponsors are promoting the Handcrafts—Mesdames John Livingston Grandin (both junior and senior), Robert Grant, Augustus Hemenway, Robert F. Herrick, Arthur Dehon Hill, Thorndike Dudley Howe, Morgan T. Firth and James O. Foss are but a few.

ALSO MRS. ALVAN T. FULLER, Mrs. John Bartol, Mrs. Guy W. Cox, Mrs. Richard P. Strong, Mrs. John Templeman Coolidge, Mrs. Ralph Dunbar, Mrs. G. Herbert Windeler, Mrs. Roger Sherman Warner, Mrs. Oliver J. Ricketson, and Mrs. Robert A. Woods among others.

MISS ALICE LEE, daughter of Mrs. Francis Lee of Chestnut Hill, is the week's most important bride, her marriage to Joseph Timothy Walker, Jr., arranged for half after twelve in the First Church of Chestnut Hill on Wednesday.

WHILE A COMPARATIVELY small number of relatives and close friends are bidden to the ceremonial, there will be a quite large company in attendance on the bride and bridegroom. Miss Mary Lee leads the feminine contingent and Lawrence the masculine portion.

THE BRIDE'S affiliations are of Vincent Club-Junior League variety and the bridegroom has a Yale background, with notable war service first with the American Ambulance Corps in France and then with MEMBERS OF THE artistic-social-official cliques are furthering the Muscovite presentation—such as the Edward Burlingame Hills, Professor and Mrs. Paul J. Sachs, Mr. and Mrs. Ellery Sedgwick, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Gaston and Mrs. Frederick G. Hall.

OTHERS IN THE illustrious roll are the Serge Koussevitskys, Joseph Lee, Mrs. Richard Hamlen Jones, Mrs. Roland G. Hopkins, Miss Rose L. Dexter, Miss Mabel W. Daniels, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic R. Galacar, Mrs. John W. Bartol, Mrs. Ralph Adams Cram and Mrs. Philip Saltonstall.

U. S. FINANCIERS PLAN ATLANTIC DIRIGIBLE LINE

Rockefeller, Ford and Others Reported as Backing Proposed Trans-Ocean Service

Washington, March 8 (Copyright, 1926, I.N.S.).—A group of American capitalists is contemplating the establishment of a trans-ocean dirigible line between the United States and Europe at "an early date," International News Service learned today.

The project, inspired by a few air enthusiasts, is so near realization, it was said, that definite types of ships, the frequency of runs and their scheduled time of flight are now being worked out.

Godfrey Lowell Cabot, president of the National Aeronautical Association, is one of those behind the proposed air line.

"A fleet of dirigibles, two or three times as large as the Shenandoah, will be flying regularly between the United States and Europe, on scheduled time, by 1935," Cabot said.

"The undertaking is being studied by a group of the country's biggest capitalists."

Secret conferences, studies and negotiations on the project have been in progress for some time. Because of the magnitude of the undertaking names of the financiers are being closely guarded. It is understood, however, that Edsel Ford, John D. Rockefeller and the trustees of the Guggenheim Aeronautical Fund are interested.

Lauds Hub Airport as Base for Trans-Ocean Flights

The value of the Boston Airport as a base for international flights in the future, because of its proximity to Europe, is pointed out by W. Irving Bullard of the Boston Chamber of Commerce in a letter to Secretary of State Kellogg, in which he advises participation by this country in the International Air Navigation Convention.

He declares that in view of the fact that several successful international flights have already been made, the Chamber of Commerce believes a regular means of communication by air may well be established between this country and Europe, and therefore the United States would benefit by entering the international convention early.

The Chamber of Commerce is also urging members of the Congressional Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce to support the Bingham-Parker Bill for regulation and encouragement of civil aviation.

150 Bonnie Brides Face Tempest in Hunt for Mates

Halifax, N. S., March 8 (A.P.).—One hundred and fifty brides-to-be are on board the Anchor liner Cameronia, bound for New York, to make glad the hearts of an equal number of young men.

In coming across from Glasgow to Halifax the maidens had a rough voyage, the captain reporting having met with extremely tempestuous weather.

CREW ON STORM-TOSSED SEA 10 WEEKS IS LANDED

Plymouth, Eng., March 8 (A.P.).—The crew of the schooner General Smuts, rescued in the Atlantic after ten weeks of hardship in the heavy seas, was landed here today by the Dutch liner Volendam. All were well except the cook, Stephen Louw, who was removed to a hospital. Doctors attributed his condition to malnutrition and drinking brackish water.

BIND WOMEN IN GEM ROBBERY

Washington, March 8 (A.P.).—Five of six thugs who raided the home of Mrs. Caroline Williams on fashionable Sixteenth street escaped with a $2,500 ring, a string of pearls and other jewelry after tying Mrs. Williams to her bed and binding eight other women servants.

The sixth man, who gave the name of Joseph Peter Davis, twenty-two, of New York, was captured.

Exhibiting faked revenue badges, the men were admitted by a maid. She and seven other servants were herded into the kitchen and tied to chairs.

Mrs. Williams was dressing when two thugs entered her bedroom. After binding her, they took her jewels and departed.

Meantime a ninth servant, who had pretended to faint, ran to a nearby hotel and employes notified the police. When officers arrived they were admitted by Davis, apparently unaware his companions had left. He directed the police to the rear of the house and fled, but encountered the servant and two of the hotel employes, who held him until a policeman arrived.

Nearly $100,000 in jewels, thought to have been the object of the raid, were stored in a vault a week ago, Mrs. Williams told the police.

Lauds Stand of Boston Evening American

New Bedford Post No. 1, American Legion, voted unanimously to thank the Boston Evening American for the article it published relative to Armistice Day being made a legal holiday.

The New Bedford post, in a letter to the Evening American, said:

"We appreciate the position you have taken in the matter and are heartily in accord with it."

The letter was signed by Stephen H. Bond, post adjutant.

GOV. SMITH IN CANAL FIGHT

Albany, March 8 (I.N.S.).—Governor Smith today joined in the fight for an American ship canal from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic through New York State.

The Governor directed Colonel Frederick S. Greene, State Superintendent of Public Works, to represent him tomorrow at Washington at the hearing before the Army Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors.

The army engineers have reported adversely on the proposed all-American ship canal on the grounds that estimated maintenance costs of $30,000,000 a year would not be warranted by the estimates of $22,000,000 freight savings each year.

Colonel Greene said today the maintenance estimates of the army engineers were too high, and that he would challenge the figures at the hearing in Washington tomorrow.

$200 MONTHLY FOR FAMILY OF SIX

Today we have an interesting budget to make for a happy little family in Milton. There is Mother and Dad and four kiddies, 6, 8, 10 and 11 years old. Rent is $50 a month, which mother feels is a bit high, but naturally she is anxious to secure nice surroundings for her little folks. The monthly income is $200.

No budget is ironclad, and while the learned statisticians—for whose ability to juggle figures I have the deepest respect since I myself have to count on my fingers—tell us that no more than 20 per cent. of the income should be spent for rent, in this case we will have to shave off a little extra rent money from maybe the savings allowance.

Here are the allotments; figured by the month:

Food—$50 a month. This includes milk and cheese, fruit and vegetables, groceries and ice, meats and eggs, bread and cereals, and any meals taken outside the home (such as husband's lunches).

Rent — $50. In a strictly scientific budget this should only be $40, and this amount should include husband's carfare to business, but we'll do some shaving elsewhere.

Clothing — $35 a month. This should rightly be $30, but I am purloining $5 for the rent extra.

Operating—$25 a month. (Another $5 off here for rent.) This includes coal, oil, wood, gas, electricity, water tax if any, laundry, service, small household supplies and telephone.

Miscellaneous—$40. Including education, dentist and doctor's bills, charity, church dues, amusements, vacations, club dues, personal gifts, personal expenses (husband's cigars, confectionery, etc.), automobile expenses, if any, luxuries, and in this case husband's carfares to business.

Savings—$1[illegible]

I'm going to repeat for the steenth time, that the food allowance should average up thusly: for every dollar spent for food, 20c or less should go for meat, eggs and fish, 20c or more for milk—(one pint a day for each child and 1-2 of a quart for each adult is the minimum allowance—more for the children if possible) 20c or more for cereals and bread, 20c or more for vegetables and fruit, and 20c or less for fats, sugars and other groceries.

Even though yours is a monthly income, I do feel that you will find the weekly method of paying most of your bills the most satisfactory. If you want to figure these weekly amounts out, multiply the monthly allowance by 12 and divide by 52.

PROPER POTS AND PANS FOR THE KITCHEN

In my travels in the lower regions of our big department stores, and in the upper regions, too,—since the last word in cooking utensils seem to roost always on the roof or in the basement—I meet many Mothers and Daughters in twittering twos planning the stocking of the Easter bride's kitchen. And I so often wish that I could butt in with a little uncalled-for advice when I see them investing many times in some complicated cooking novelty and overlooking some of the—to me—indispensible kitchen helpers.

The shape, size and material of our cooking utensils certainly make the greatest difference in successful results. For instance, it is fatal to bake an extra rich cheese gingerbread intended for cup cakes in a sheet pan, as it is far too crumbly

HOW TO SELECT LAMB CUTS IN MARKET

LAMB VERSUS MUTTON

It is cheering news that lamb is now selling at the lowest level for several months, but I find that because at this season of the year lambs are apt to be heavier than desired, the housewife is suspicious that it may be mutton that she is purchasing.

As a matter of fact, at this time of year especially, heavy legs are as good quality as the lighter ones and frequently better.

Fully 95 per cent of the lamb and mutton marketed in Boston is lamb and in any event it is easy to recognize lamb by the bright, clean flesh, the covering of light fat and the reddish bones. The bones of mutton have harder, smoother surfaces and the flesh is darker.

The best vegetable values this week are carrots, turnips, cabbage, beets, onions, lettuce and spinach. The best buys at the fruit counter are

PET RECIPE FOR PERCOLATED COFFEE

Maybe coffee is "the cup that cheers," but I've seen a lot of coffee that's just an insult to a hard working stomach. No doubt you have your own pet method of coffee-making—and no doubt it's a good method, too—but is your coffee always just as good as the best coffee you ever tasted? If it isn't, it can be if you'll follow these simple directions.

In coffee-making above all things—it surely does pay to be particular—particular to see that the interior of your pot is immaculately clean and shining—that you have a kettle of fresh water, boiling madly, and freshly ground, carefully measured coffee.

First, scald your coffee pot with boiling water. Next measure the

DYED LACE IN FROCKS, VOGUE THIS SEASON

A cable from Paris, just received, brings a few new hints for the Spring seamstress. We learn that many dyed lace frocks will be seen the coming season, that the general silhouette will be very straight and supple, that there will be many pleats and plisses of all kinds—often sewn down very low. Many insertions both pointed and rounded. The waist line will be moderately high. Boleros will continue popular, particularly for evening.

Neck lines will be small and trimmed with scarves, neck bands and ties. Sleeves are straight and shorter than usual.

BETTER RADIO PROMISED

Better radio days are coming. Radio fans throughout the country may anticipate further reduction in interference, and better policing of the other lanes after July 1, although broadcasters and other station owners may have to watch their steps more carefully, if the present House appropriation bill passes Congress.

$114,000 INCREASE.

The monies alloted for the supervision of radio by the Commerce Department for 1926-27 are increased by $114,000 over appropriations for the current year, although $19,000 was cut from the budget estimate. More inspectors, additional sub-offices and three radio testing trucks are assured if the bill passes this week as proposed.

The total figure now stands at $335,000, but it may be increased or decreased by the Senate before it becomes a law.

Unfortunately there seems to have been a misunderstanding for about a year in the House committee as to just what the Department of Commerce was authorized to do in the clearing up of interference. During the recent hearings, however, the Department representatives explained that its radio supervisors and inspectors had nothing to do with the inspection of receiving apparatus.

Chairman Madden insists that no monies be made available for the supervision of individual receiving sets, and that inspection be confined to sending or transmitting stations. This is agreed to, but it is believed that the misunderstanding lost the Department its request last fall for money to buy and equip several radio testing trucks. This year an item of $9,600 is included in the bill for the purchase of three new radio testing trucks: one for use in New York, one in Chicago and the third on the Pacific Coast.

STATE THEATRE STUDIO ON AIR

The WBZ Radio Movie Club will present its program of feature attractions under the direction of George Fecke from the specially appointed Loew's State Theatre Studio, the new home of this organization, at 10 o'clock tonight. This new attraction has become one of the most popular features on the air today. In addition to the special musical program featuring the Loew's State presentations, listeners have the opportunity to hear some accurate inside information on the movie stars and their hobbies and receive coveted autographed photos.

Irving Aaronson's Commanders, direct from Elsie Janis' "Puzzle of 1925," which appeared in Boston last Fall, will be the feature of the club broadcast tonight in a specially arranged program. Without doubt one of the greatest and most versatile group of entertainers on the stage today, these eleven champions of syncopation will give their best to entertain the WBZ audience. Joseph Glover, whom theatrical men contend is a real "find," will make his debut on this program and Frank McGrath, baritone, and Larry McCabe, Scotch comedian, popular artists with movie club members, will also be heard during this broadcast.

WILLIAMSON TO TALK ON 'AP'

F. E. Williamson, chief of the Boston bureau of the Associated Press, will be a most interesting speaker at Station WNAC, The Shepard stores, at 10:30 o'clock tonight. Williamson will tell of the "Romance of the Associated Press," the great institution which covers every corner and gathers and distributes news unceasingly day and night.

The men who make up this organization live close to the dramatic side of life and experience much which is tragic and romantic. Writers, who never sign their articles for they go under the caption, "By the Associated Press," willingly forego the privilege to be part of this great news gathering machine. The association, being co-operative, has nothing to sell, and it does not make a profit. Accordingly there is little chance for it to receive the publicity it bestows upon others. The talk by Chief Williamson on Monday is in response to many requests for first hand information of how the news of the world is gathered and disseminated.

MAUDE ERICKSON SINGS ON WBZ PROGRAM

A treat is in store for the radio listeners tonight at 9:30 when Mme. Erickson, the great Swedish dramatic soprano, sings before the WBZ microphone.

The Aleppo Drum Corps, always a favorite with the listeners, will be on the air again tonight from WBZ at 9 o'clock. There is always something in the martial music that this band of 218 musicians plays which makes the half-hour concert seem much shorter.

U. S. DAIRY AND EGG EXPORTS $12,476,895

Washington, March 8 (A.P.).—American exports of dairy products and eggs last year were valued at $12,476,895, an increase of $356,010 over the year before, while imports rose from $37,102,445 to $37,818,588. The figures compiled by the Commerce Department, showed a marked reduction in exports of butter, eggs and egg products, while cheese more than doubled 1924 exports. Imports o butter dropped more than 12,000,000 pounds, while imports of cheese, milk, cream, eggs and egg products increased.

BODY CREMATED TO TUNE OF 'MERRY WIDOW WALTZ'

London, March 8 (A.P.).—To the lilt of gay music, including strains from "The Merry Widow Waltz," the coffin of Alexander M. Carlisle, famous shipbuilder and friend of the former Kaiser, was taken from the chapel at the Golder's Green crematorium today into the furnace chamber for cremation. The ceremony was arranged by Mr. Carlisle himself a few weeks ago, when he knew the end was near. He paid for his own cremation and had the certificate framed. He also doled the fee of the organist.

CORLISS IS 'TOO BUSY'; WON'T FIGHT SUIT

Los Angeles, Cal., March 8 (I.N.S.).—Corliss Palmer, beauty contest winner, will remain in Hollywood indefinitely, continuing her screen career. She does not plan to go to New York to defend the $200,000 alienation suit brought against her by Mrs. E. V. Brewster, wife of the millionaire publisher.

Miss Palmer has denied herself to all visitors for the past two days.

Brewster, however, who is in Los Angeles, said Miss Palmer had no intention of going to New York.

"Let Mrs. Brewster sue if she desires," the publisher said. "Because Miss Palmer and I announced our engagement she probably thinks there is some grounds for such a suit, but let her go ahead."

WORD IS COINED TO DESCRIBE NEW STUTZ

"Roadability" is the remarkably apt adjective coined by Edward Becker, head of the Stutz Motor Company of Boston, in describing the new Stutz model now on exhibition at the auto show.

"Safety and 'roadability' are synonymous terms," he said, "and our cars are built with those two thoughts always in mind."

To illustrate exactly what he meant by "roadability" Mr. Becker pointed out some of the outstanding and unique features of the Stutz car.

There is the straight overhead valve motor which gives an acceleration of from 10 miles to 50 miles per hour in 15 seconds, an also a deceleration of a stop in seven seconds or 180 feet at 70 miles an hour. The acceleration is direct result of engine design, while the deceleration is the result of the brake action coupled with the distribution of weight on the four wheels and the low centre of mass in the entire car.

He pointed out also that the seat position is decidedly important from the standpoint of "roadability" and demonstrated that in the Stutz the driver is comfortably seated, low in

NASH MAKES IMMEDIATE TAX CUT

Action by the Nash Motors Company relative to Congressional adoption of the automobile tax reduction measure is reported by E. H. McCarthy, Nash and Ajax general sales manager.

Word was wired distributing organizations informing them that in accordance with the established Nash policy of protecting its dealers and customers to the fullest possible extent, "we would absorb the tax reduction up to March twenty-eighth, inclusive, when the Governmental reduction becomes operative.

Although the passage of this tax reduction law had been expected by the industry and the public, it nevertheless contributed to a better feeling generally throughout the dealer body and among automobile buyers as well as among manufacturers because it removed uncertainty and is regarded in most quarters as being a far step forward toward the ultimate freeing of the industry from the burden of special taxation.

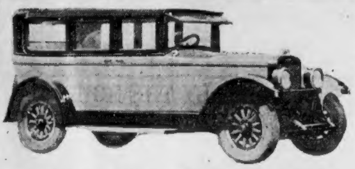
"So far as our figures on National Retail Sales Show, there has been no particular disposition on the part of Nash and Ajax customers to delay their purchase until the tax reduction measure became operative. In fact, the urgent demand from all sections of the country has forced our plant to overtime work and by far the greatest production on Nash ever achieved in the history of the company, while at the same time Ajax sales and production are establishing new high records," says Mr. McCarthy.

RICKENBACKER SETS PACE IN ENGINEERING

Rickenbacker was first to adopt the double flywheel, thereby eliminating engine vibration. Double flywheels today are standard on most of the better class cars. Rickenbacker was first to use an air cleaner on their engine. Today most manufacturers are talking of air cleaners as a sales feature on their cars.

Four-wheel brakes were first adopted and standardized by Rickenbacker in 1923. At that time Rickenbacker said that in two years all manufacturers would equip their cars with four-wheel brakes. Time has proved the contention of Rickenbacker, that cars to be safe must have four-wheel brake equipment.

SET QUALITY CAR STANDARD



"A history of Rickenbacker since 1922 shows that Rickenbacker has led in what were engineering improvements and innovations at that time, but are now considered standard on all quality cars," says J. M. Clarke, president of the Clarke & Stevens Company, New England distributors of Rickenbacker automobiles.

FRIGATE FUND $152,049.65

The national fund to save "Old Ironsides" is leaping forward, having reached a total of $152,049.65. CRAVEN'S PAL FLAYS COUNTESS

Unkissed Hubby Cites Wife's 'Cavewoman Traits'

The Love Story of a Boston Girl Who Wants Only One Man---and the Husband Who Strayed

SYLVIA STARR, employed in the Boston Public Library, has been engaged to marry RANDALL PHELPS for nearly a year when he suddenly asks her to free him from their engagement. He tells her with brutal frankness that he has fallen in love with her best friend, FAY SHIRLEY.

Sylvia is stunned. But she gives Ranny up, much to the satisfaction of her Aunt Agnes ("AUNT AGONY"), who brought her up. She calls Ranny Phelps a lazy good-for-nothing, and urges her beautiful niece to marry PETER WILK, who's in love with her.

Fay's arms—both of them were wrapped around Ranny's neck and his arms were around her slim, curving waist.

As the time draws near for Fay and Ranny to marry, Fay tells Sylvia that they don't care for each other quite so much as they once thought they did. And Sylvia discovers that she is secretly seeing a great deal of her old beau, EDDIE CARTER, a Boston business man.

On a night in May, Peter gives a picnic supper in Concord in honor of Sylvia's birthday. Fay and Ranny, feeling most hilarious, arrive late, declaring the engagement ended. The young people play hide-and-seek in the dark woods, and Sylvia and Ranny find themselves paired off. Ranny tells Sylvia that, after all, she's the only girl for him, and she recklessly suggests that they elope and be married then and there. So they do.

Ranny tires of the honeymoon in a week, and takes Sylvia back to Boston. She finds a letter from Fay Shirley in his clothes, but throws it away, without reading it! She makes up her mind not to be jealous. But a few nights later, when she and Ranny are having dinner after an afternoon of house-hunting, she sees him flirting in a mirror on the wall of a Charles street restaurant, with a woman sitting at the next table. Disgusted and on the verge of tears, Sylvia hands Ranny a pencil and sarcastically asks him if he wouldn't like to ask the woman for her name and address, and become acquainted with her!

Ranny satisfies Sylvia that he has not been flirting with the red-headed woman, and they go on planning to furnish "The Nest," as they called the little Beacon street flat soon to be their home. It is furnished and on the occasion of their first meal at home Ranny is late.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER XI

IT was half past nine before Sylvia heard the low, familiar rumble of Ranny's car in the street below The Nest. Its white headlights flashed as it swept under the windows and stopped in Beacon street.

"Whew! He must have turned that corner on one wheel," she said to herself. "He seems to be in an awful hurry to get here all of a sudden."

She switched on all the lamps with their canary-colored silk shades and stood in the doorway of the living room for a second, looking at it happily—how cozy and cheerful and comfortable it was, with its cushions, its fresh flowers, its deep chairs and wide book shelves. Just the sort of place for a tired man to forget his troubles at the close of the hectic day.

Sylvia bent down and pushed Ranny's house-slippers a little closer to the tiny wood fire that burned in the grate, before she hurried out to the kitchen to take one last look at the dinner she had cooked more than three hours ago.

She groaned as she looked at it—it was ruined utterly. The lamb chops were hard and dried up in the greasy pan, the new peas had turned hard and gray, and the lettuce was wilting under the French dressing.

Sylvia almost cried as she surveyed the meal she had been so proud of. "It looks like the wreck of the Hesperus'" she wailed silently, "and I did so want this first dinner to be so perfect for him—"

Then with a little shrug of her

BARONET CALLS VERA 'SPITEFUL'

Friend of Craven Denounces the Countess of Cartcart for Writing Play on Elopement

Worcester, March 8.—Countess Cathcart may be a countrywoman of Sir Gerard Arthur Maxwell-Wiltshire of England, but the baronet, in Worcester today, handed a pretty "panning" to the titled woman and confessed traveling companion of moral turpitude fame.

Sir Maxwell is a close friend of the Earl of Craven, woh fled to Canada, and came to America with Craven. Report had it that the baronet was at the party of Earl Carroll, big tub and faucet man, but Maxwell denies this today while commenting on Vera's attendance.

Her efforts to enter the country he characterized as "a storm in a tea cup" and declared her arguments were not "those of a lady."

"The Countess," he said, "is fond of publicity, perhaps, and her persistence to get into the country and her desire to have produced her play, 'Ashes,' may be a combination of temperamental fondness for publicity and the old proverb, 'Hell hath no fury like a woman scorend.'

"You know, this play, 'Ashes' is purported to be an account of her life in Africa when her name and the Earl of Craven's were allied. It seems strange that anyone would commit indiscretions and then write about them. I have never read the play, however."

Speaking of the Earl Carroll bathtub party, he said:

"No one seems to doubt the truthfulness of the event, and I scarcely believe the newspapers would have published such detailed accounts if it had not taken place.

"I certainly did not attend the party. And I profoundly hope and am certain that none of my friends did. You know, Countess Cathcart claims to have left the party before the tub was brought in."

KELLOGG TAKES WEEK OFF AND GOES SOUTH

Washington, March 8 (A.P.).—Secretary Kellogg left Washington today for a week's visit at Pinehurst, N. C. The respite from official duties was advised by physicians after an attack of the grip. He will return to discuss with Ambassador Alanson Houghton and Minister Hugh Gibson plans for participation by the United States in the coming League of Nations' preparatory armaments conference.

Tended Furnace

MRS. CECILE C. EPSTEIN AND DAUGHTER, AMY.

To shovel snow and light furnace fires is no job for a woman, particularly when she is ill, according to Mrs. Cecile C. Epstein, who has brought a divorce action against her husband, Dr. Nathaniel Epstein, Framingham dentist, on grounds of cruelty, neglect and misconduct.

Mrs. Epstein charges her husband with [illegible] with two young women, who at different times were employed by him as assistants in his office. Miss Gertrude Kelly of No. 63 Clark street, Framingham, and Miss Oberlin Bruseau of No. 486 Lincoln street, Marlboro, are the two women she names as co-respondents.

Dr. Epstein, in answering her interrogatory, denies the charges of misconduct, according to Mrs. Epstein's counsel.

The trial is set for March 30 in Middlesex Probate Court.

DAUGHTER IN TILT OVER LA SALLE WOLF'S FORTUNE

Chicago, March 8 (A.P.)—The controversy over whether John W. Worthington, the "Wolf of La Salle Street," left an estate of $3,000,000, or merely $250,000 continued today.

Alice Worthington, daughter of the confidence man who died in Atlanta penitentiary last Tuesday, maintained that the entire estate was valued at the smaller sum and that she possessed a will leaving it all to her.

This assertion was countered by Robert L. Cohan, an attorney, who represented the sick financier when he returned to Chicago from Mexico last October. At one time he says he saw on Worthington's bed alone more than $500,000 in stocks, bonds and negotiable paper. He explained that he drew up the will when Worthington returned to Chicago last October, that there were no witnesses because of the fear that Worthington would be arrested if his presence here was known.

QUEEN'S COUNSEL

REGISTERED UNITED STATES PATENT OFFICE

by Marie Queen of Roumania

GIVING RUMANIA A FACE!

WHEN I was in Paris during the Peace Conference I was asked for what I had come.

Laughingly I replied:

"So as to give a face to Rumania!"

Far-off countries are featureless to those who know nothing about them unless, of course, they have great monuments or world wonders which are heard of by all, such as the Pyramids, Niagara Falls, Mont Blanc, the Holy City, the Russian steppes, the Sahara Desert or China's Great Wall.

During the Peace Conference there was always a crowd of men's faces—faces of every sort, from many lands. But the small countries at that time were not having a particularly good time.

Our delegates were doing their best, holding their own bravely under adverse circumstances, but nevertheless Rumania was being somewhat roughly handled.

Then I came—because? Well because Rumania is my life's work, my raison d'etre, the child I have made it my pride to help to grow up. Why should I not come—and give it a face?

Not a man's face. There were enough already of men's faces round that green cloth. But something different, less matter-of-fact, less aggressive and combative, and not yet worn out!

Most countries need a face.

When we hear the name America we think of Lincoln, Roosevelt, Wilson. Russia, alas, has now the face of Lenin and of Trotsky which wears something of a grimace.

Why not my face, then, for Rumania?

I tried to make it as brave a face as possible, as smiling, as pleasant as I could. Besides, I had during the war, and all along the none-too-easy road of my youth, become so entirely one with my adopted country, that I felt I had won a certain right to give it my face.

Like all other humans, I shall have but my own short time upon this earth. But if my country and others will accept my face as a sort of symbol of Rumania, I have a feeling that I may bring it good luck. Certainly I bring it love and good cheer and a good intent which I hope shows in my face—this face that I want to give to Rumania!

SHE HURLED ROCKS, HE CHARGES

Says When He Went With Cop After His Clothes He Found Them Torn Up

A chunk of rock and four torn suits of clothing were exhibits presented today in Middlesex Probate Court by George Ryan of Watertown as evidence of the alleged cruelty of his attractive young wife, Mrs. Alice E. Ryan.

Seeking a divorce, Ryan told Judge Arthur [illegible] that following his marriage in February, 1923, the [illegible] was kissless until September.

He admitted going to Nantasket on several trips with other women, but declared that his relations with them were purely those of sociability. Mrs. Ryan, holding a baby, sat in the courtroom and listened to his recital of her alleged abusive treatment.

The rock, Ryan said, was one she tossed through the window of his [illegible] the Hotel Touraine [illegible] window and hitting him on the head.

She attacked him with a pair of scissors after first hurling a coffee pot in his direction, he testified, and one day waylaid him on the eighth floor of the Touraine, when he was on his way to see his employer, and jumped on his back, pummeled him without [illegible].

The rock-throwing episode followed shortly afterward and later when he got a policeman and went home for his belongings, he found his clothes torn up and stuffed in bureau drawers.

Excellent Fistic Menu Scheduled Up-State Tonight

GOOD BOUTS ON CARD IN LYNN

Lawrence and Holyoke Also Offer Headline Attractions; Fans Are in for Real Action

By RINGSIDE

Tonight is the night that the sound of the leather-pushers will be heard in the cities of Lynn, Lawrence and Holyoke, with all indications that the out-of-town folks will get their share of thrills. Greater Boston will have the New England Junior championships at Somerville on Thursday night.

Archie Skinner of Scotland will be in the final go of the Shoe City card with the Honolulu Kid as his opponent. These two heavyweight chaps should make the fur fly. Then there will be Al Delmont, Jr., a real nifty kid with the padded mitts, in a tussle with Mickey Russell of Fall River. Jerry Vitale of Beverly faces Tony Lucci of Clinton, while Frankie Merna of South Boston and Johnny Barrett of Cambridge will compete the eight-round card of bouts. In the lone six rounder Harry Roberts, Cambridge, will box Charley Costello, East Boston.

GOOD BOUTS AT LAWRENCE.

In the Merrimack Valley district the fistic lovers can have their dinner and then journey to the Winter Garden, Lawrence, to witness the excellent progress in the ring of Al Mello of Lowell. The New England champion is booked to exchange punches with Bobbie Lowrie of Scotland. Mello is facing a tough enough opponent in Lowrie to make it a worth while attraction.

The semi-final battle in the Garden [illegible] Sardo [illegible] with Nick Madonna of Lexington. Roy [illegible] Nashua, N. H., is to meet Henry Janco, while Edward Thomas of Cambridge is tackling Marty Desprey.

GARCIA MAKES HOLYOKE BOW.

Bobbie Garcia, a featherweight scrapper from Camp Holabird, Maryland, is to appear in the feature bout at the Valley Athletic Association show in the new Arena at Holyoke. Garcia is to meet Ray Miller of Chicago. The former is going in to substitute for Leo Kid Roy of Canada, who injured his hand smacking Danny Kramer beyond his sense of humor last Monday at Philadelphia.

Although both fighters are more or less new to the up-State fistic lovers, their reputation in the ring is par excellence. Harry Goldstein, the New England flyweight champion from the West End, is to face Clovis Durand of Montreal in the semi-final contest.

HARVARD CREWS MAY HAVE TWO-MILE COURSE

Harvard crewmen have sought for fifty-five years for a two-mile course. Action to this effect is due this afternoon when a bill before the Legislature to fix Cottage Farm Bridge will be brought up. The bill provides for a bridge with [illegible] openings which are in line with each other.

Providing the measure is passed, three or more crews will be able to start at the Weld Boat Club and race to the end of the river. From the [illegible] to the Cottage Farm Bridge there are arched [illegible] and should these spans be changed Harvard crews will have a two-mile course and and an upstream Henley course.

FIVE HEADLINERS IN BOXING SHOWS TONIGHT

HARRY GOLDSTEIN
N. E. flyweight champ, who meets Cloris Duraud of Montreal at the Valley A. A., Holyoke.

AL MELLO
Welterweight champ of N. E., who clashes with Bob Lowrie at Winter Gardens, Lawrence.

AL DELMONT, JR.
Young Al will try to prove his worth against Mickey Russell of Fall River at the Casino A. C., Lynn.

BOB LOWRIE
Scotch battler, who engages in his second bout with Al Mello at Lawrence.

FLATLEY WITH BRAVES

The Great Golf Bug
Braves Are Good
Learn From Stein

BY NICK FLATLEY

ST. PETERSBURG, March 8.—Golf has taken just as much of a clutch on baseball players and owners as real estate and other things.

Nick Flatley

The gallery at the finish of the Hagen-Jones match at Pasadena was sprinkled thickly at the finish with diamond luminaries. Among others we noticed Judge Fuchs and A. Powel of the Brave directorate, Colonel Ruppert, the Yankee magnate, and his manager, Miller Huggins, John McGraw, the famous Napoleon of the Giants; Tris Speaker of the Indians; Umpire Frank Wilson, Big Babe Ruth and practically all of the golf bugs of the Braves and the Yankees, with a fair sprinkling of Washington Senators.

THE Braves golfing squad collects candidates each Sunday. Manager Banny, getting to be a fine [illegible] the game on off days. He will not permit his athletes to swing clubs on days when games are played or after practice sessions, but he lets them go during the vacation periods. The shooters on the club now include Davey, Dick Rudolph, Johnny Cooney, Joe Genewich, Jack Burns and Hugh, Joe Ogrodowski, Rube Marquard, Walter Gautreau, Harry Riconda, Oscar Seimer and Larry Benton. And some of them are getting pretty good at it, too.

THEY have been getting pointers from Joe Stein, the handsome young man who is professional at Nashua during the Summer. Joe is assisting Walter Hagen at Pasadena, and is a remarkably fine teacher. He is especially adept at steering novices, having the patience that is needed for that sort of instruction. He made a fine iron player out of Banny after one informal lesson, and was even able to show us how to hit a tee shot [illegible] to the fairway. Joe likes baseball, and will pass up real money any time to help one of the players hit the elusive [illegible]

NEWS OF THE BALL CAMPS

The Brooklyn infield is receiving plenty of attention as it promises to be quite a problem. At present it looks as though it would shape up with Fournier at first, Standaert at second, Maranville at short, and Johnny Butler, the expensive third-sacker from Minneapolis, holding down the hot corner.

The Washington Senators have discarded the practice of Regular-Yannigan games and are confining their attention to slugging drill each day.

Miller Huggins is expecting great things from his Yankees. He recalls the team of 1923 when nothing much was expected but a lot happened.

Connie Mack is putting his A's through hard sessions of a varied nature. Several practice games are on tap this week. It seems highly improbable that Joe Hauser's trick knee will let him play very much this season as Joe Poole will be regular first sacker again.

Fred Leach, believed to be a Phillie holdout, will probably arrive in camp this week. Practice and exhibition games are scheduled for this week.

The St. Louis Cardinals have returned to San Antonio after two games with Waco. Thirty runs were garnered in the contests.

Tarpon Springs saw the St. Louis Browns squad complete at last, 28 players. Cedric Durst was the last arrival.

Eddie Collins bagged a game for his White Sox when he drove in two men with a hefty double. He is setting the pace for his team and seems as speedy as ever.

Cleveland's batterymen, 16 in all, arrived at Lakeland from Hot Spring, Ark., and every one reported in fine condition without a sore arm in the lot. Outfielder Summa and Infielder Lacy are suffering from colds, these two being the only casualties on the entire squad.

SCHOOL FIVES ARE NAMED FOR TECH TOURNEY

Brockton, Salem, Lowell, Plymouth, Attleboro, Medford, New Bedford High and New Bedford Vocational School will compete in the Technology interscholastic basketball tournament this week-end according to an announcement made today by Supervisor William McCarthy.

The high schools listed above have been invited due to their excellent record this season. The winner and runner-up of this stourney will be eligible to enter the annual Tufts interscholastic [illegible]

The Tech affair, being the first of its kind, is scheduled to take place in the hangars, while the [illegible] Gymnasium is where the Medford college will make the [illegible] of their annual championship classic for the schoolboy hoopsters.

Boxing Notes

St. Joseph's T. A. S. will again be on tap with an amateur boxing tournament in Commercial Hall on Saturday night. Bouts are listed for the seven championship classes, 112, 118, 126, 136, 147, 160 and heavyweights. Entries close with William H. Cuddy, Room 10, 268 Washington street, city.

Thirty girls of New York University have started a boxing class and one of the boy team members will instruct the fair ones.

Wouldn't we just love the Jimmy Slattery-Young Stribling boxing [illegible] that is [illegible] for Madison Square Garden here on March 26. There might be a few hundred holders of Annie Oakley's and some real thirsty fight followers that would thrive on such a match.

Jack Delaney of Bridgeport, Ct., and one of the best attractions in the East, is fistling it about tonight at Broadway Arena, Brooklyn. On the receiving end will be Joe Lecman.

Boston Y. M. H. A. are staging another amateur boxing show at their headquarters with competition in the 112, 135 pound and heavyweight classes novice, while the 126 and 147 pound divisions will be open. This show is booked for March 18.

Helen Wills to Write for Boston American

THE first article in a new series of tennis by Helen Wills is to appear on these pages Wednesday. Every tennis player and everyone who has read of this American girl's wonderful campaign on the courts of the Riviera will want to follow this series closely.

McNamara and Partner in Local

New York, March 8 (A.P.)—Three teams were leading the rest of the field by one lap at the end of eleven hours of pedaling today in the fortieth annual six-day bicycle race which began at Madison Square Garden at 9 o'clock last night.

The McNamara-Georgetti, Goile-Neitethe and Coburn-Petri teams were tied at 190 miles and 1 lap. The other thirteen teams were bunched at 190 miles.

Dick Murphy Reveals Hurdling Secrets of Earl Thompson

This is the third of a series of articles on the hurdles as told by John P. (Dick) Murphy of Boston College, a joint holder of the indoor world record for the 45-yard high hurdles, New England A. A. U. 45-yard indoor hurdle champion and New England intercollegiate 120-yard high hurdle champion. These articles will appear exclusively in the Boston Evening American.

By DICK MURPHY
As Told to Bill Consodine

The hurdler after countless hours of tedious practice has an aching for competition. After expending every effort possible and knowing that he is in the pink of condition, he is anxious to match his strides with those of other hurdlers where his condition will compete against the condition of others and the winner will be rewarded.

The indoor hurdler must be very careful in the matter of starting. It is here that the hurdle race is often times decided. The starting posture does not vary in any degree from that of a sprinter, in fact the best sprinting form would be the most perfect starting position for the hurdler. At the starting signal the hurdler should come off the mark fast.

The approach to the first hurdle should be at the greatest possible speed that one can attain. Little thought should be given to the big barrier that appears bigger and bigger in front of the on rushing athlete. The spring of the hurdler over the first hurdle should start as far away from the obstacle as possible.

The build of the hurdler and his ability in this particular event will make the distance vary. Some times it will be nearer to the hurdle than others, but the difference is accountable always to either build or [illegible].

THOMPSON HAD ADVANTAGE.

Earl Thompson, one of the greatest hurdlers of all time, took off about eight feet in front of the hurdle. In nearly every race, the old Dartmouth star was the last man to leave the ground. He was behind in the air on the first barrier but always first to touch dirt and start away on the dash to the second hurdle. This can be explained by viewing Thompson as he comes off the first hurdle. The leg that is stretched in front of him immediately dropped with a snap when it had gone over the hurdle and landed about one foot in front of the hurdle.

Thompson's form is the most perfect form for the hurdles. One who could take off quite a distance from the hurdle and land quite close to it has a decided advantage over his opponents who are unable to do so.

The greatest error that is made in hurdling is the tendency to get close to the hurdler before jumping off. This slows up the man, very frequently throws him off balance and ruins his entire flight.

Constant practice makes a hurdler perfect in form. In clearing the hurdle there is little space between his body and the top of the cross bar of the hurdle. It is said that Thompson frequently put a half a dollar on the top of the cross bar and then knocked it off with the back of his thigh, without knocking the hurdle over. That is real form, perfect in every respect.

The speed attained over the first hurdle must be kept up during the entire flight. There are three steps between each pair of hurdles. These must be taken at top speed. The inability of one to make this requisite three steps between hurdles means that he will never be a hurdler of even mediocre ability. If he takes more than three steps at speed he will go into the next hurdle or be forced to fall below the hurdle.

WHAT HURDLER NEEDS MOST.

Preservation balance is necessary at all times. This can be acquired by the long take off and by keeping close to the hurdle on the come down. The final dash for the tape is of great importance. Every bit of energy that the hurdler can put into it is needed.

Real success in the hurdles may be attained by following these few rules: Hard training in the hurdles, real form acquired by constant practice; speed developed by dash work.

Mary K. Browne May Captain U. S. Team

New York, March 8 (A.P.)—Miss Mary K. Browne of Santa Monica, Cal., former national woman's tennis champion, soon will go to the aid of the present titleholder, Miss Helen Wills, on foreign courts. Misses Wills and Browne hold the national doubles honors.

Miss Browne is a likely candidate for captain of the American women's team which will face English women stars at Wimbledon this year for the Wightman trophy.

Royalty Entered in Nice Tournament

Nice, France, March 8 (A.P.)—With Helen Wills not playing, interest in the Nice lawn tennis tournament today centred around a battle of royalty, with King Gustav of Sweden and Prince Chichibu, second son of the Japanese Emperor, on the opposite sides of the net.

They appeared in the handicap doubles, Gustav having as his partner the former Spanish champion, Setterthwaiz, and Prince Chichibu being supported by R. L. Murray of England.

Gustav and his partner had an easy first round match, and it would not be surprising if Setterthwaiz carried the pair to final victory.

Leading the singles at the top of the draw, Miss Wills next meets Miss Helen Shirley of England with Frau Neppach of Germany her probable opponent in the semi-finals.

Senorita De Alvarez, whom the American champion has twice defeated in straight sets during her Riviera campaign, leads the lower half of the draw and is expected to meet Miss Wills again in the final.

HANEY ARRIVES AT RED SOX QUARTERS

New Orleans, La., March 8.—Frank Haney, only Red Sox holdout, has reported to Manager Lee Fohl. He held a conference with Bob Quinn and ironed out his differences. He is expected to sign a contract after the practice session today. The former Tiger will play third base for the Sox.

Two School Teams Commence Baseballing Wednesday

MEDFORD NINE ALL PREPARED

Coach Roberts Has a Good-Looking Team in Making; Latin Starts Wednesday

By EDDIE DONDERO

Eddie Dondero

Baseball activities will be resumed at Medford and Boston Latin high schools next Wednesday afternoon. The inaugural practice sessions, which confines battery candidates alone into action, is listed to take place in their respective gymnasiums. However there is a slight possibility of working outdoors if weather permits.

Coach "Pickings" Roberts said that there aren't any such things as holdouts in the ranks at Medford. According to present indications, almost 75 ball hawks will make their presence felt at the official opening. Only 30 candidates can be accommodated indoors without crowding the twirlers. [illegible] and have all [illegible] at the same time. [illegible] Coach Roberts hopes to [illegible] when everyone will be given an opportunity to [illegible]. The pitch[illegible] to go.

CONNOLLY LOOKS GOOD

Danny Connors, Eddie Egan, Val[illegible] and Ben Fowler comprise a quartet of right-handed twirlers who are available. Connors will probably take up most of the mound assignments and his performances should be more than satisfactory.

He must fill a vacancy left open by ex-Captain Webber Knox, who was rated on par with Danny McFaylen by several experts of the national pastime last season. [illegible] and Fowler, a combination of snowball artists, will alternate in the other [illegible] tilts.

Captain [illegible] O'Connor, the extraordinary backstop, will take good care of everything on the receiving end. "Speedy" Wells is another youth who can patrol the berth behind the bat. A few rookies will also be added to the squad as relief hurlers and maybe one or two more catchers.

Edgar Michaelson, Guido DeFina, Ed Herb, George Chalmers, "Big" Eliot "Mose" Hanley and Ed Kirk will respond to the next call issued by Coach Roberts. Following this the locks will be pried off the bat bags and vigorous training then begins at Fulton Street Grounds, the home of Medford's ball team.

New Baseball Series Will Be Great Help, Asserts Davidson

"YOUNGSTERS in high school, college and on the sand lots should get a great deal of help from the Boston Evening American's forthcoming illustrated articles on baseball as played by college stars of Massachusetts. There are some wonder ball players on your list. They know the inside game and play their positions as they should be played. I certainly think that the series will help the youngsters a good deal."—CLAUDE DAVIDSON, head of the New England League and coach of the Harvard freshman baseball team.

BRAVES MAKE READY TO MEET YANKEES

By NICK FLATLEY

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 8.—Three large league games, and an equal number of intensive practice sessions stretch in front of the Braves this week and should steer the boys into something like the condition that they need to be in to start the season.

There are two battles with the Yankees here, one Tuesday and the other Thursday. On Saturday the athletes go out on the tour visiting the camp of the Senators at Tampa.

The contests against big league teams are the first sort of training [illegible] off weight [illegible] I expect to hang [illegible] space.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER R. HORTON

Another fine golf resolution for this year would be to determine to shorten down the back swing for this year's play. If you do that during 1926 I venture you will never again use the old swing at three quarters. I have discovered a method, too, by which you can make the right distance back with the swing automatic or perhaps I should say I have worked out a method by which you can make it impossible for you to go back too far with the club. [illegible] own [illegible]. Some such system apparently is all that will stop golfers from overswinging. [illegible] the one I have, to be detailed [illegible] immediately [illegible] will give me the satisfaction of having been of good service.

The Boston Bruins [illegible] in the National Hockey League [illegible] home game at the Arena tomorrow night with Tex Rickard's New York Americans. [illegible] a very excellent attraction.

Owner Charles F. Adams and every player on the Bruin team is [illegible] in top form to keep Boston in the leading trio of teams in the [illegible] they stay in the third place [illegible] Hub folks will be all set for the playoff.

To stay [illegible] place the Boston [illegible] must beat New York tomorrow night and on Friday when they stop off at Pittsburgh, must wallop the Pittsburgh Yellow Jackets and then it will be Boston against Montreal and Ottawa in the play-off.

The Bruins are just three points [illegible] of the Pittsburgh outfit in the standing or four points in the [illegible]. Never before in the history of [illegible] hockey has there been so [illegible] excitement.

There is little or any chance of Ottawa or Montreal getting tossed [illegible] of their leading positions. The [illegible] comes with the real Eastern trio; Boston, Pittsburgh and New York. All these three cities are anxiously trying to jab, hook and slice their way into the three-cornered play-off, which looks just as good to the Boston playing team as any of the others.

Why Many Fine Girls Remain Unmarried

By Beatrice Fairfax,

Who Occupies a Unique Position in the Writing World as an Authority on the Problems of Love and Marriage.

THERE'S a popular idea that youth always finds love. Yet thousands of young women never had a "beau."

Hundreds of girls write me frankly of their longing for the good times, attention and love which passed them by. Many women go through life without receiving a proposal of marriage.

Of course, countless women remain unwed, not from lack of chance to marry, but because the men who sought them have failed to satisfy their ideals. A surprising number even in this matter-of-fact age are single because of loyalty to a long-lost love.

Hundreds of attractive girls and women have few opportunities to meet congenial men. Doubtless a few prefer the independence of "single blessedness" to marriage. But the fact remains that hundreds, if not thousands, of girls suffer from heart hunger which is never satisfied.

I can think of a number of spinsters I know, of sweet and lovable character, who have remained single from necessity, not choice.

Emily is smart, up-to-date clever

NO BEAU! SHE WONDERS WHY

MAKES HERSELF ATTRACTIVE

TALKS IT OVER WITH MOTHER

BECOMES A GREAT FAVORITE

Yet at forty two she is settling down to the fate of an "old maid" school teacher.

As a young girl Emily was fairly attractive and a jolly companion. But she was dreadfully sentimental and this frightened men away.

Mame told all the men she knew how much attention she received from other men. She tended to money and social position, hoping for a rich marriage. But, at thirty-five, she's a gushing, affected "bachelor girl."

Lotta's a dear. It's a pity she hasn't married, because she'd make some lucky man so happy. Perhaps Lotta may wed yet—let's hope so. She's only in her late twenties.

No man has ever paid Lotta attention. Men don't notice her, yet they sigh for the sweet, old fashioned girl. However, it's Lotta's fault. If she would cultivate her appearance and personal dainty charm, she might attract much attention and whole-hearted devotion, for her easy sweetness, good humor and sincerity of character are irresistible, once they're discovered.

Kay's story is more cheerful. Although, at seventeen, Kay felt unduly alarmed because she hadn't any friends among the boys, she had the good sense to analyze her situation, discover what was wrong with herself and make good. So, at eighteen, Kay's one of the most popular girls at the university she attends.

Kay reduced to reasonable slenderness and grace. She dresses with extreme care and individual smartness. She has perfected her dancing. She takes care to know all the late musical hits [illegible] them for dancing or accompaniments. She reads widely, both of popular successes and [illegible].

She throws herself into school social life with the same deep, absorbed interest with which she watches her favorite film stars on the screen. Kay is frankly delighted with her friends and good times, and talks everything over with her mother.

No wonder Kay is sought after. She has something to add to the [illegible] times about her, and she cares keenly for people. Naturally they respond by caring for her.

Be Attractive if You'd Attract Admiration

You are quite right in wishing your share of good times and attention. You are entirely justified in wanting a "beau" and later on a good husband and home. But forget sentimentality if you would succeed and think of men as interesting friends and comrades. Try for friendship, then love will take care of itself.

You need not cheapen yourself to attract and hold interest. You need only be your most charming, considerate, attractive self. Men will like you better for placing a high value on your friendship and love.

Polish your personality as a jeweler polishes a precious stone. Cultivate fastidious daintiness, chic simplicity, becomingness of dress. Cultivate your social talent whatever it may be so that you can entertain your friends. Try to bring out the best traits of others. Above all, forget yourself and interest yourself eagerly in the world about you.

You can't afford to be less than attractive if you would attract and hold love. Having polished your personality and built up the sweetness and friendliness of your disposition, if you do your share by entertaining your friends you will find your reward in friendship freely offered.

"[illegible] little Arlette out by blizzard what might have froze Tarasov if you do not save him?" he asked excitedly.

"Mr. Perry doesn't know where she is," I acknowledged. "He's frightfully upset."

"Tell him be calm," Tarasov ordered. "Arlette [illegible] shack by woods. [illegible] own shack down [illegible] have got off train at [illegible] often her maman liked [illegible] down hill in snow."

"Three trains came in without her this morning," I said.

"Siding come before station," Tarasov explained. "It [illegible] ing till station. I think perhaps Ar[illegible] by cottage—her shack."

"Why do you think that?" I asked.

Tarasov gave me an inscrutable look as he replied:

"Her maman she like slide in snow. Arlette she maybe like so."

"That isn't what you really think," [illegible] days of chivalry.

"I go find Arlette," he said quietly. "When I find her at time enough [illegible] Maybe the snow too heavy. Maybe it right I shall find her. I go [illegible] get lose."

"What's all the excitement?" Jim's voice broke in suddenly and without any special concern. "Why should you look for Arlette? The child was on the train that brought me in. She got on a few stations after I did. She had a big [illegible] her here behind a brave jehu who wasn't afraid to drive his sled that far through the drifts. She's out [illegible] So let's all be calm and sit down to [illegible]"

"She blow fierce," contributed Tarasov. "I go town for provisions. I get stuck in snow. Most I freeze. Barbara Lyovna she save me."

"I'm glad my wife had you to protect her," said Jim pleasantly. [illegible] suggested the wisdom of a hasty exit to Tarasov.

"I go help Arlette," he said.

I turned, drawn by something fixed in Jim's glance. Jeanie was standing in the hallway like a figure of stone waiting to have life breathed into her. I realized suddenly that it was almost a year since she and Jim had seen each other. Breathlessly I waited for the greeting that would pass between them.

"Jeanie!" cried Jim.

His voice was broken, filled with pleading, ringing with love and [illegible] wrecked up somehow by the unfair and ever present Harrison pride. He took a step forward and held out his arms. Like a little girl who has been lost and is found again, Jeanie ran forward and crept into the shelter Jim was offering her.

For a minute they stood silent. [illegible] face against Jeanie's hair. [illegible]

I felt that it would be irreverent to intrude on the moment when they met and forgot all that had separated them. A moment later Jeanie came to my side, and as she took my hands in hers I knew this was the adorable Jeanie who makes you forget all the wilful pride and wayward scorn of which she is capable in less kindly moments.

"You're a sweet thing, Anne," [illegible] is lucky to have [illegible]"

"[illegible] lucky to have you." [illegible]

"How?" Jeanie asked quietly but with a note in her voice which evidently escaped Jim.

"By my own foolishness," Jim said.

"If Anne forgave you — why shouldn't I?" asked Jeanie, and a fugitive dimple came out at the corner of her mouth.

Ways and Means of Getting Rid of Insomnia Suggested by Dr. Reed

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.
Former President of the American Medical Association.

IT is well to bear in mind when you are suffering [illegible] to sleep or insomnia that such condition is due either to a physical illness such as fever, cough, flatulence or a toxic state of the blood, or to some psychic disorder, such as worry or anxiety.

As I have emphasized in previous articles, it can persist by auto-suggestion after the physical causes are gone.

Dyspepsia and constipation may cause insomnia even though their existence is not recognized. It is possible to awaken between 12 and 2 o'clock as a result of digestive disturbance without actually feeling any pain or discomfort. The popular remedy for insomnia due to flatulence is a glass of hot milk at night. This has the effect of dispelling the gases as well as improving [illegible].

Insomnia due to worry is very often made worse by fear of not sleeping.

There is no danger of dying or going mad from ordinary insomnia, and health can be maintained on much less sleep than most people take.

Complete rest and muscular relaxation are to a large extent substitutes for it. Sleeplessness from overwork is rare unless worry accompanies and can be cured by going away for a holiday.

However, it is best not to run away from the environment in which the insomnia arises.

One trying to manage his insomnia should have his own bedroom and take food to bed with him such as milk or [illegible]. He should have some not too exciting novels. "Patience" or jig saw puzzles may help [illegible].

Sometimes wakefulness in the middle of the night can be relieved by douching the face and neck with cold water and walking up and down the bedroom clad in the night-dress only.

By day mental and physical activities must be reduced to the minimum, warmth and food well regulated and avoidance of excesses of tea, coffee and tobacco.

Take no drugs without medical advice.

Normal physiological sleep is that which gives refreshment, is not disturbed by harassing dreams and deepens naturally into slumber. Long and heavy sleep leaving the sleeper tired, and light unsound sleep are forms of [illegible].

Close mental work before retiring should be avoided, or followed by [illegible], preferably with a congenial companion.

In children sleeplessness is often the result of fear of the dark.

If cold feet are the cause, a hot mustard foot-bath or a cold foot-bath with a brisk towelling are useful, and a hot water bottle should not be despised.

The bedroom should be dark, quiet and well ventilated. A spring bed is best away from the wall. Bed clothes should be well aired, as it is much easier to keep warm in a dry bed than a damp one, especially for those who suffer from cold feet and attacks of shivering. The bed clothes should not be more than enough to keep the body comfortably warm. A low pillow is best unless the blood pressure is high.

Do not be a slave to habit and unable to sleep anywhere but in one bedroom or on one side. It is important to form good habits of sleep: to go to bed and get up at the same hour every day.

The practice of muscular relaxation is very useful and also the habit of "day-dreaming," such as following pleasant trains of thought like the catching of huge trout, the hitting of tremendous drives or the conquest of very steep hills on a very powerful car.

Insomnia lasting more than a week may have started to become habitual: then a change is necessary, both of bedroom and of the whole routine of undressing and the rest. Exercise, air and anything that raises the level of physical health is good, as is relaxation and psychological treatment for the mind.

No physically and mentally healthy person suffers from insomnia.

QUART OF WATER CLEANS KIDNEYS

Take a Little Salts if Your Back Hurts, or Bladder Is Troubling You

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excite the kidneys. They become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness and sleeplessness disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys, or your back hurts, begin drinking a quart of water each day, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tabelspoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, and in a few days your kidneys may act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also to help neutralize the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications.

Best Way to Loosen Stubborn Cough

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, or bronchial asthma.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly and tastes good.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

PINEX for Coughs

Children Who Mock Authority

By L. Lamar Matthews

MRS. McBRIDE had been a teacher before her marriage—and a good one, too. That is the reason she had so little patience with the shortcomings of her own children's teachers. And perhaps there was a secret urge to induce her little ones to feel that mother knew more than anybody else.

So when Jimmie could not understand how to give the arithmetic [illegible] as the teacher had instructed, his mother said, "That is all foolishness." Then she proceeded to drill him in another method. Of course Jimmie was confused next day and bungled his lesson.

Once Mary reported that her conduct mark was low because she turned around in her desk and stood up sometimes, when she was restless. Then her mother answered, "Well, I don't care if you did. There is nothing wrong in that. Don't worry about what is on that little piece of cardboard."

Every few weeks small matters came up that brought forth criticism or ridicule of the teachers from Mrs. McBride. And so it continued through the lower grades and on into high school.

By the time that Jimmie was a senior and Mary a junior they were young bolshevists in high school. They were continually in some sort of trouble with their teachers—especially with the less capable ones. These teachers felt the lack of deference in the attitude of the young McBrides and naturally resented it. To outwit their teachers became a sort of game with Jimmie and Mary, and they were always sure of an appreciative audience at home when they recounted their triumphs.

The final result of this proceeding was that Mary and Jimmie went through high school with the standing of average pupils. They graduated without any honors, although they were clever, good-looking and talented. That hurt the pride of Mrs. McBride and made her husband feel that it would be useless to waste any more money on his children's education. And so neither of them went to college.

A little wholesome respect for authority and a willingness to defer to the opinions of instructors is absolutely necessary to any pupil's success in school. It is a foolish mother who fails to co-operate with teachers. For it is always her own children who pay, if she doesn't.

For this way to stop Colds

Some years ago a famous laboratory developed a remedy for colds. It proved itself quick, effective and complete. It stopped colds in 24 hours. It checked the fever, stopped the headache, opened the bowels, toned the system. So recovery from the cold was prompt. The remedy brought no ill results, as quinine did before.

That laboratory announces its creations to physicians only. Most people don't consult doctors on colds. Millions of people who needed this help did not learn about it.

So W. H. Hill secured that formula and called it HILL'S Cascara-Bromide-Quinine. He sent out millions of samples to prove its effects. And he spent vast sums in telling the fact to people who have colds. As a result countless homes came to rely on it.

Then other men decided that more people should know of it. So they paid $1,000,000 to secure the remedy. Now the facts are told in thousands of newspapers and magazines. People everywhere are dealing with colds in this effective way.

This is to urge that you try HILL'S. Take it promptly. Every hour of delay means a deeper-seated cold.

Be sure you get HILL'S. The years have proved that no other help compares. A cold is a serious matter. Stop it at once, and its results in the best way you can find.

If you take HILL'S now, relief will come tomorrow. The fever will be checked, the system toned, the bowels opened. The poisons will be eliminated. All those things must be done, and they should be done at once. Get HILL'S and start at once. At your drug store.

On its face, answering inquiries for The Service seems an odd job of work in life, owing to the odd nature of some of the inquiries.

In fact it is far from odd. Take today's typical questions below. They ask—where can I buy wreaths, a pup, a chemical text book, a brand of silk hosiery, celluloid, a lending library, a wick, a pump, a brand of corsets, a file and an oil gauge.

An odd conglomeration indeed if ONLY ONE person was after such an array of things.

But they represent in fact the questions of a score of reader friends.

And surely there is nothing odd in a farmer wanting a pump, a young lady wanting a brand of hosiery she esteems but cannot find in a store, or an automobile owner wanting the address of an oil gauge concern which can replace the appliance on his car.

The Service, through its monster information file, answers such questions promptly.

What's yours?

Here are some typical questions:

Wreaths—"Where can I purchase at wholesale, wreaths for Memorial Day, also the frames for making same? As I have a small shop on the Cape and do not come to Boston very often I should like this information to have on hand so that I will know just where to go when I do go to town. Inclosed please find a two-cent stamp for your reply. Respectfully yours, A. R. F."

Pups—"I am interested in finding a place where I can buy a good collie pup. My small son has a birthday next week and I wish to get one for him. Any information that you can send me will be much appreciated. A. R."

Text Book—"Will you please send me the information where I can buy a chemistry text book, also equipment for laboratory work? I am very much obliged to you. L. C."

Celluloid—"Will you give me the name of a company in Boston that makes a specialty of celluloid? I wish to get it in colors and plain, also want to know where I can buy the Silver Lake clothes line. I am very much pleased with the information that you have given me and shall certainly take my shopping questions to this service for assistance in the future. J. B. W."

Pump—"There is a pump called the Foster Centrifugal which is for household use and I have seen it on exhibition in Boston. Now will you be so kind as to send me the information where it is sold? I cannot seem to remember the name of the place where I have seen it and as I hope to get to the city within the next week I am very anxious to have the address and name of the concern that sells this pump. The Thrilling Love Story of a Boston Girl and the Husband Who Strayed shoulders she braced up and blinked back her tears—oh, what if the dinner was spoiled? Did it really matter so much? She just wouldn't let it spoil their joy in this first evening together in their own Nest, the first of many, many happy evenings in the long happy years that she knew were ahead of her and Ranny.

A Surprise

She ran to the door of The Nest and threw it open as she heard the grating of Ranny's key in the door downstairs. There came a rush of feet and a flurry of laughter on the steps.

"Who in the world can it be?" Sylvia wondered. "Ranny's brought someone home with him."

And on this first night, of all times! On this night that was to have belonged to just the two of them—to her and Ranny. How [illegible] to have asked anyone to come home with him!

"Hello, Bride!" [illegible] cheerful voice, and Eddie Carter came puffing around the turn of the stairs. He took both of Sylvia's hands in his soft fat ones and pumped them up and down by way of greeting.

"Well, how's the blushing bride? How's the old married woman?" he asked, and laughed as if he had said something very, very funny.

Sylvia laughed too [illegible] but her grave eyes looked past Eddie at Ranny—and past Ranny, at Fay Shirley! Fay, coming up the stairs and smiling with her green eyes, as she waved a shining flask with one hand and held tight to Ranny Phelps' coat sleeve with the other.

"Hello, Lovey!" she said to Sylvia, and took her in her arms, kissing her on both of her flushed cheeks. "Hello Darling. We thought we'd come up and celebrate the wedding a lil' bit!" Her high pitched voice was the least bit shaky.

Every now and then Fay Shirley looked pretty, and this was one of the times. Her blue-green eyes were like water with sun on it, and her lips and cheeks were brilliant with color. Her satin [illegible] was the exact shade of her red hair and it was lined with green.

Fay's Perfume

"Don't ask me to take off my hat!" she said to Sylvia when the two of them were alone in the little bedroom. "It's so becoming! Ranny and Eddie have been tellin' me all evening how pretty I am [illegible] love [illegible] me how pretty I am!"

She sat down before Sylvia's dressing table and [illegible] Sylvia's toilet water [illegible] over her face and neck.

"I know it's not true [illegible] I know I'm as homely as [illegible] just the same I love people to tell me I'm pretty," she went on [illegible] as she held the bottle of scent up to her nostrils.

"Violet," she said. "I used to [illegible] when I was [illegible] around with Ranny."

She broke off and set the bottle down on the dressing table with a bang.

"I don't use [illegible]," she added and swayed uncertainly to her feet. "[illegible] come on out in the other room and let's see what the boys are doing."

Ranny and Eddie Carter were sitting side by side on the davenport against the background of gay silk cushions Sylvia had made all by hand, and Eddie had one of them, a yellow one, on the floor under his feet. He had one hand full of salted peanuts and with the other he was throwing them into his mouth, one by one.

"Say, got anything to eat?" he asked Sylvia, "I'm starving."

Eddie was always starving.

Sylvia had never seen him in her life when he wasn't "just dying" for food.

He followed Sylvia out into the little kitchen of The Nest and went around peeping into pans, peeping into the breadbox and the oven.

"[illegible] these, I guess," he said when he found the lamb chops. He ate them [illegible] ing his great [illegible] against the cold stove.

"[illegible] never makes [illegible] sober, like it does some people," [illegible] Sylvia with his mouth full of meat. "Fay and Ranny and I have been together since six o'clock [illegible]."

"How did you happen to meet him?" Sylvia asked.

Sylvia Sad

"We didn't meet him," [illegible] "We went up to his [illegible] to have [illegible] with him [illegible] his marriage [illegible] She said, 'Well, let's go [illegible] have a lil' drink with Ranny to celebrate his marriage.' An' then we all piled into his car and came out here."

He [illegible] anything [illegible]

"I hate eggs!" Fay broke in violently.

At one o'clock Eddie went to sleep on the davenport and Fay made up her mind that it was time to take him home. She and Ranny managed, after a struggle, to get him downstairs into Ranny's car.

Alone in The Nest, Sylvia threw the windows wide open to the clean night air, letting out the reek of stale liquor and cigarettes. She emptied all the cigarette stubs into the waste basket in the kitchen, cleared away the remnants of the ruined meal and sat down to wait for her husband.

She lay back in her chair with closed eyes, feeling the tears that pricked along the edges of the lids. She knew that if she ever let those tears force their way out, she was [illegible] When she opened them and looked at the clock it was ten minutes after [illegible]

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds, and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga.

MANY years ago when General Lew Wallace wrote "Ben-Hur, a Tale of the Christ," he wrote one of the greatest books that will ever be written!

It has been translated into ten different languages, and read by millions.

When "Ben-Hur" was dramatized, it became a great success season after season. In each city where it was played the stage was torn up [illegible] the treadmill for the eight [illegible] to run upon in the great [illegible] race, which is the crescendo [illegible]

[illegible] no imagination in reading the [illegible] or limited facility of staging [illegible] story could ever adequately present Lew Wallace's great story of "Ben-Hur."

Not until today, through Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who have spared no time or expense to make this the world masterpiece, has "Ben-Hur" unfolded in all its true glory and splendor!

It has been filmed in the actual spots where the story was laid. Every detail has been worked out with infinite care and untiring research.

From the beginning to the end "Ben-Hur" is filled with breathless interest.

Thousands are in the cast. [illegible] There is the sea battle [illegible] pirates and the Romans [illegible] flames and [illegible] from the Roman [illegible] There is the chariot race [illegible] ever [illegible] Acres [illegible]

Teeth Made White
—glorious, gleaming!

Your gums like coral to contrast them—just remove that dingy film, see what happens

Please accept 10-day tube to try

HERE are beautiful teeth for the asking. Those dazzling clear teeth that add so immeasurably to one's personality and natural charm.

Millions have found them in this new way. Dental authorities urge it. In a few days you can work a transformation in your mouth. Dull teeth thus are made to glisten. Gums are firmed and given a healthy, coral color.

Now a test is being offered. Find out what can be done with your teeth quickly. Just mail the coupon.

Film—that's the trouble

Dental science now traces scores of tooth and gum troubles to a germ-laden film that forms on your teeth.

Run your tongue across your teeth and you will feel it—a slippery, viscous coating.

That film absorbs discolorations from food, smoking, etc. That is why your teeth look "off color" and dingy.

It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. It lays your gums open to bacterial attack and your teeth open to decay. Germs by the millions breed in it. And they, with tartar, cause pyorrhea.

More brushing won't do

Ordinary dentifrices and cleansing won't fight film successfully. Feel for it now with your tongue. Note how your present cleansing method is failing.

Now new methods are being used. A dentifrice called Pepsodent—different in formula, action and effect from any other known.

Largely on dental advice the world has turned to it.

Removes the film. Firms the Gums

It accomplishes two important things at once. Removes that film, then firms the gums to healthy coral tint.

A few days' use will prove its power beyond all doubt. Send the coupon. Clip it now before you forget.

Vapors stop Colds

VAPORS reach a cold directly because they are breathed right into the air passages and lungs. It is for this reason that Vicks VapoRub brings such quick relief. When rubbed over throat and chest at bedtime:—

It is vaporized by the body heat and inhaled, while you sleep, right to the affected parts, loosening the phlegm and easing the difficult breathing.

At the same time it acts through the skin (like a poultice or plaster) "drawing out" the pain and soreness.

Most colds yield by morning to this double action of Vicks.

DAILY SHORT STORY

LITTLE PLAY MATE

By Louis Arthur Cunningham

"WHAT'S [illegible] trouble [illegible]" asked Marion Thorpe. "Aren't you going skating with Alan? I saw him camped on the steps of his house waiting for you. He was smoking a horribly strong pipe. I almost swooned when I went by him. How do you ever pal around with such a bear?"

Janet shrugged helplessly. "You know I've tagged along with Alan Jameson since I wore pinafores. He still teases me with the fact that he fed me from a bottle when he was twelve and I was squalling. The strange part of it is he never seems to realize that I'm grown up now. He still treats me as if I were a baby—sort of big brother little playmate attitude. And you know how a woman feels."

A Real Man

"Sure!" laughed Marion. "When a girl is seventeen a man either is or is not; there's no half-way position. Why don't you impress your irresistible and eternal femininity on the big boy? You are foolish to go chasing him down a mountain on skis when you might be driving in Bob Graham's comfy roadster with a loving, pre-matrimonial arm about you."

"Oh, Bob Graham is [illegible] of a snow drop.' Alan is a real man anyway, even though he does dump me in a drift when I want to be a woman instead of a tomboy. He never had a sweetheart and I seem to be far from his thoughts in that regard. You'd think I smoked a pipe and shaved daily to hear him talk to me. And when he does get sentimental he quotes Dante or explains the philosophy of Herbert Spencer and asks my opinions on heredity. Ye gods, what a man! I think I shall have to give up playing with him and get me a husband."

In feminine pursuit of this idea, Janet grabbed her skates and hurried off to find Alan.

"You're late, Jan," said Alan, pounding the ashes from his pipe on the thick heel of his brogue. "Thought you would be along half-an-hour ago. We're going to tramp round by the waterfall, you know, and it will take a good hour to reach the lake. On your way!"

Alan strode off at a good clip. Janet trotted, obedient, at his side. She looked up at his strong, weather-tanned face, but he was preoccupied with something or other and sucked noisily at a disreputable briar that should have graced the ash heap long ago.

"What are your views on marriage, Jan?" He fired the question so suddenly and it fitted in so well with her previous musing that her views fell into chaos and she could only reply in a tone obviously false . . . to any except Alan . . . "Silly!"

"That's my idea exactly," continued the philosopher, to her dismay. "Bacon says something . . . what is it? . . . a man with wife and children has given hostages to fortune. It sort of cramps your style, does marriage; gives dreams a drab reality, and then, as Stevenson says, 'In marriage a man becomes slack and selfish and undergoes a fatty degeneration of his moral being.' If I were married I could not have such a playmate as you, Jan."

Unusually Silent

"No, you couldn't," she said, shortly enough.

Janet was unusually silent on the long tramp to the lake. Even chocolate-bars, which were Alan's panacea for her ills, failed to rouse her interest.

"Buck up, Jan! What's the rub? I shall be giving you 'Hence, loathed Melancholy,' in a moment. Talk to me, Miss Gloom!"

"What's the use of talking to you?" Janet explained snappishly. "I wish . . . I wish you would come to earth sometimes. I do, really, Alan! Now, don't throw snow at me or I'll not go a step further!"

Alan laughed, picked her up in his arms and carried her, kicking like a little fury, through the snow.

"What's the matter with the child? Is my little playmate getting cross?" He dropped her none too gently into a particularly deep and soft snowdrift.

Any other time Janet would have laughed like a delighted kiddie; now she raged and said the meanest she could find and for the rest of the excursion preserved a sulky, defiant silence.

Alan waited for her in vain the next day. She went past him in Bob Graham's car and though he waved to her, she gave him not so much as a nod of recognition.

Alan trudged off alone. There wasn't much fun in snowshoeing by oneself. His tobacco tasted dry and bitter and his philosophy refused to work.

"Never thought I would miss the little terror so much," he said. "Well, I suppose she will marry young Bob, settle down to a home and kids and—gee, I'll bet she'd have pretty kids!"

Regular Fellow

Pleasedly he contemplated little Janet. He had never before thought of Janet as a potential wife. She had been a regular fellow with him and the feminine side of her had not entered into the fellowship.

The following day he waited in the hope that she would relent and come as usual to meet him. When she did not, he went after her; but Marian informed him with a rather pitying smile that Janet had gone with Bob.

Alan's wisdom was not proof against his chagrin nor did the consolations of the great minds he loved help to soothe a fast-swelling ache in his heart.

The road to the lake seemed depressingly lonely. Everything, the snow-motleyed hills, the dark fir and spruce, the sublime stillness, seemed incomplete without her presence.

He was half-way up the hill by the frozen water-fall when he spied her and Bob. They had been skiing and Jan, in negotiating a reckless jump which he had often forbidden her, had met disaster.

Alan reached them as Bob was trying to lift her in his arms. Alan smiled with faintly-concealed contempt as he pushed the youngster aside and picked her up like an infant. It was a sacrilege for anyone else to touch Jan. He felt as he pressed her to him that she was his. Two days ago she had been just his playmate; now she was, he thought fondly, his woman. He would fight for her, kidnap her, if necessary.

She tried to be cool, but the ankle pained her and it was so comfortable in Alan's arms.

"I think it's strained a bit," she said. "Bob can look after me."

"Bob may look after you tomorrow; but in emergency the clumsy strength that the Lord gave me must be used. I'll carry you back."

Bob floundered behind them with the skis.

"Your friend is better at driving a car than handling an alpenstock. I suppose the former accomplishment appeals more to you, Jan?"

Miserably Dull

"You suppose [illegible]" His jacket was pleasantly [illegible] against her cheek and he carried her with wondrous ease. "I'd rather be just your playmate than . . . if . . . Oh, it's been miserably dull the last few days!"

"Oh, has it? I thought you were happy and I was preparing for a life of loneliness. Will you come skating with me again and snowshoeing and the rest, Jan?"

"Surely," she answered with happy resignation. "But, Alan," . . . her fingers reached up to his face . . . "won't you . . . kiss me sometimes?"

"Like this?" demanded the big fellow.

"Y . . e . . s . . s . . s!" sighed Jan when her breath had labored back.

"I shall give hostages to fortune," smiled Alan. "What are your views on matrimony?"

FOXY GRANDPA'S DAILY INTERESTING BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

BOBBY came in from school and he had such a queer look in his eyes that I knew something extraordinary had happened.

He stood before me for a few minutes and then he spoke.

'Do you think we could keep another pet, Foxy Grandpa?"

"It all depends upon what it is," I said, laying down my paper.

"But he's hurt, Foxy Grandpa," said Bobby as if he had a lump in his little throat, which I think he had.

"Take me out and show me what it is," I said getting up out of my chair.

"I've got him right here," said Bobby, reaching very carefully into his pocket.

"A bat," I cried. "Where did you find him?"

"Up the road," said Bobby, "and I knew as soon as I saw him there that he was hurt, because if he hadn't been he would have been hanging upside down asleep somewhere."

"I wonder what's happened to tht poor little thing," said I, taking the limp creature in my hand.

"I think his wing is hurt—look here, Foxy Grandpa," said the boy, pointing to the wing, which I soon saw was injured.

"Run over to the barn and bring that old cage of Polly's and we'll fix him up."

Bobby ran out like a shot, and soon I heard him coming back with the cage rattling against his little legs.

"Now," said I, "we'll fix him a nice little bed here and when he is better he can fly back to his friends."

Into the bottom of the cage we put the bat, and then there arose the question of feeding him.

"Do you think he would like some milk?" asked Bobby.

"Do you think he's a kitten?" laughed Bunny. "There's only one thing that interests that fellow."

"What is that?" asked Bobby, anxiously.

"Flies" announced Bunny.

"Flies!" exclaimed Bobby.

"Sure," said Bunny. "That's all bats do—fly around at night and eat flies and insects. People don't realize the good they do."

"I didn't know they were any good. I know that girls are always afraid that they will fly in their hair and get caught there. Girls always scream and cover their heads up when they see a bat."

"That's all bunk," said Bunny. "People do get such strange notions. I tell you that bats only care about one thing—sleeping the whole day long upside down—so they can get a flying start if anything attacks them—and eating flies. You'd better get busy catching some flies for this fellow. I'll bet he's hungry."

Bobby started at once with the fly-swatter and fly after fly he caught. He fed that bat flies all day long. He counted seventy flies which his new pet ate that first day. And the funny thing was the bat didn't eat the legs of the flies—but stripped them off as neatly as you please!

Soon we moved him out in the barn where he could catch flies himself. And I'll tell you what he did. All day long he didn't pay any attention to the flies. They could crawl all over him. But towards evening when the flies got sleepy, the bat woke up and you should have seen him pounce on them and gobble them up.

Oh, yes, his wing got well and we let him go and I am sure by now he is batting around at nights having a great time.

Don't Fuss With Mustard Plasters!

Musterole Works Without the Blister—Easier, Quicker

Don't mix a mess of mustard, flour and water when you can relieve pain, soreness or stiffness with a little clean, white Musterole.

Musterole is made of pure oil of mustard and other helpful ingredients, in the form of a white ointment. It takes the place of mustard plasters, and will not blister.

Musterole usually gives prompt relief from sore throat, bronchitis, tonsilitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, headache, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of the back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet, colds of the chest (it may prevent pneumonia).

TRIPP FINDS POWER AIDS DEFENSE

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor

General Guy E. Tripp, Maine born chairman of Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., declares: "The more extensive the growth of our electric power industry along present lines, the greater will be the military strength of our nation."

Guy Tripp

"While we are more fortunate than some other nations in being entirely free from militarism, there is also some loss in this gain because our nation's defenses are weak in many respects. It is, therefore, highly gratifying to find a major industry, such as electric power, developing naturally along lines that are thoroughly satisfactory from a national defense standpoint."

Among the favorable military factors which result from the modern tendency on the part of electric power systems to form large interconnected units, General Tripp cites the following:

An ever-increasing amount of electric power is being provided, (which is a military asset in itself), and this power is being distributed over an ever-increasing area, which is improving the living economic conditions of our rural districts, thereby increasing our political stability and consequently our military strength.

The growth of industries suitable for munition production in the Mississippi Valley and the middle-west, is being stimulated, permitting more and more of this work to be done away from the Atlantic Coast region which lies more or less open to attack.

The number of men required to produce a given quantity of munitions is being constantly decreased and this increases our potential man power for active service.

Where all the industries in a given district are served by one large power system, it is a simple matter, in war emergencies, to supply power to industries in the order of their military value. In particular, large blocs of power can be concentrated at single points for the production of such war material as poison gas, powder, nitrates, and ferro-alloys.

FINANCE
By B. C. Forbes

A bear movement in the stock market which ordinarily would take a year has been accomplished in a week.

That briefly sums up what has happened in Wall Street.

Although no such swift decline in stocks was ever witnessed, there was an unprecedented absence of hysteria or anything suggestive of a panic either in Wall Street or throughout the country. And the aftermath has also been unique. Financial and business sentiment, instead of having been severely shaken, remains as confident as before. Another novelty has been the entire absence of any flurry in the money market. Loans were as freely available during the debacle as they were during the preceding rise. Then, too, there has been not a single Stock Exchange or Curb Market failure, an extraordinary testimony to the improvement in the methods of conducting the brokerage business.

* * *

Taking a detached view, the events of the last week have inspired confidence and encouragement rather than nervousness and discouragement.

Thus far business statistics are satisfactory.

February bank clearings broke all records. Postal receipts ran 8 per cent. above February of last year. Railway car loadings eclipsed all previous February totals. Steel prices have actually moved up slightly and requirements for immediate consumption are large. Leading motor manufacturers figure on breaking all March records before this month ends.

The records kept by this column show that last month 72 companies declared extra or increased or initial or resumed or stock or back dividends, compared with 64 last year and 49 in 1924. For the two months of this year the total is 159 against 133 for the first two months of last year and 127 two years ago.

Reflection has led to the conclusion that the Nickel Plate decision is more favorable than unfavorable. The way to railway mergers has not been blocked and nothing has happened to put a damper on the many consolidations under consideration in other fields—the $240,000,000 Associated Oil-Tide Water Oil Amalgamation announced on Saturday is an example of what can be expected quite frequently during 1926.

CHANDLER-CLEVELAND DIVIDEND TO BE $4

Directors of Chandler-Cleveland Motors Corporation will hold a special meeting March 12, the first since the new company was organized. It is expected that preference shares of the company, which are issued share for share for Chandler Motor stock, will be placed on a $4 annual dividend basis, compared with $3 paid on Chandler stock. Deposits of 263,134 shares of Chandler and 270,385 shares of Cleveland stock have been made out of respective issues of 280,000 shares in each company in relation to the merger.

EASTERN STEAMSHIP'S DEFICIT IS GREATER

Eastern Steamship Lines, Inc., reports for aJnuary deficit after charges of $108,927, including all lines with the exception of the Gulf & Southern Steamship Company. This compares with a deficit in January, 1925, of $70,061. Directors declared regular quarterly dividends of $1.75 a share on first preferred stock and 87½ cents a share on no par preferred.

LAMSON & HUBBARD TO PAY ON BACK DIVIDENDS

Directors of Lamson & Hubbard Corporation declared a dividend of $4 per share on account of accrued dividends on the $1,431,700 of 7 per cent. preferred stock, payable April 15 to stock of record April 1. This is the first payment on this issue since the final 1920 disbursement. Arrearage to date amounts to $36.75 a share.

URBAN Tobacco Co. earned $8.45 a share of common in 1925, against $2.57 a share in 1924.

TODAY

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE thinks the "stock shake-up" is a good thing for the country. There is no lack of employment, prosperity is going right ahead, And if "somebody" lost a million dollars in the shake-out the loss hits speculators, not regular business men.

THE BRITISH, who manage to keep two dry eyes when we have trouble here, are also convinced that the little "shakedown" was a good thing for trade generally. That would have made a great difference to our stock market gentlemen in days when England, with her surplus income, was the big buyer of American stocks. The war changed that. We buy our own stocks now—and collect interest, very moderate interest, on billions that Britain owes us.

JUSTICE HOLMES, of the Supreme Court, who celebrates his eighty-fifth birthday today, is a shining light of the high court, from which many younger men than he have retired because of age.

Justice Holmes inherits the strong intellect that his father, Oliver Wendell Holmes, inherited from a line of educated, thinking ancestors.

He represents genuine democracy, and a constitution for the people, not for special interests.

MR. BRENNAN, OF CHICAGO, is running for the United States Senate just to prove the national strength of Governor "Al" Smith.

Mr. Brennan plans to pile up an overwhelming vote in Illinois, then say to Democratic delegates in 1928, "Just see how they voted for me, who am only a pale reflection of my friend, Governor Smith."

MR. BRENNAN'S friends denounce McAdoo as "the prohibition candidate." Some, including those opposed to Governor Smith, think that is bad tactics at this stage of the game.

If Mr. Smith's own friends put the label "dry" on McAdoo, and "wet" on Governor Smith, they will make it difficult for dry Southern delegates to explain a wet vote for Smith.

THE DEMOCRATIC fight, as now lined up with McAdoo on one side, Smith on the other, one wet, one dry, will not keep President Coolidge awake. It is about time for the "best minds" to select their compromise financial candidate and let the poor thing run, as Mr. Davis did last time.

TRAVEL DEVELOPS new trade. The war sent millions of young Americans to France. Now France is sending millions of snails to America, young Americans having learned to eat and like them.

The snails are raised artificially in French cellars, under artificial sunlight, and artificial rain. Snails eat only after a rainfall. When they stick out their heads and lift up their eyes they are sprayed with milk and flour and get fat.

ARDENT SPORTSMEN, "Fish and Game Club members," are praised for their kindness of heart. They spend time and money feeding herds of starving deer deprived of natural food by heavy snowfalls in the Adirondack mountains.

Suppose you read of "sporting deer" saving human beings from starvation that they might have the pleasure and excitement of shooting them later?

BANK STOCKS JUMP IN VALUE DURING MONTH

Average price of ten representative stocks of New York bank and trust companies increased 29.80 points to an average value of 777.80 during February, the New York Trust Co. reports. Except for a small increase in stock prices of shipping companies, this is the only advance recorded in a list of 112 stocks, the bank says, the list as a whole showing a decline of .80 point.

"THE CAVE MAN" SHOWN AT FENWAY THEATRE

One of the leading society men of New York was once a truck driver, according to Heywood Broun. He barged his way in with the haughty insolence that had once made him dominate traffic routes, and, moreover, he got away with it. So does the truckman as played by Matt Moore in his latest screen vehicle "The Cave Man," a riotously funny farce now at the Fenway.

When a rich and frivolous girl introduces her "big black diamond man from the coal yards" into her exclusive social circles and his crudities are credited to the fact that he is an eminent London socialist, and she falls in love with him in spite of herself, things are apt to get exciting as they certainly do in "The Cave Man."

Sharing the stellar honors with Moore is Marie Prevost, who is at her best as the pampered little beauty who seeks to relieve the monotony of the social whirl by her adoption of the grimy and wildly amusing coal man. Others in the cast are John Patrick, Myrna Loy, Phillis Haver and Hedda Hopper.

"ROSE OF THE WORLD" SMART FILM AT OLYMPIA

"Rose of the World," a screen adaptation of the Kathleen Norris novel of the same name, is the feature of the week at the Olympia. Patsy Ruth Miller is starred in the title role of "Rose Kirby," the girl who lived for revenge, only to discover that she much preferred love.

Alan Forrest plays "Jack Talbot," the rich man's son who yearned for the poor heroine, but who succumbed to an arranged marriage with a wealthy girl of his mother's choice.

Pauline Garon, pert and petite, abandons for the moment her flapper characterizations for the dramatic role of the selfish and headstrong wife of Talbot.

The Men That Make the Automobile

What Some Leaders Think About the Industry Now

Upon the opening of the big auto show in Mechanics Building it is interesting to learn the views of prominent leaders in the business. Letters have been received by the editor at his request containing suggestions that interest every man of importance in that industry, and every owner of an automobile.

Those interested in manufacturing the automobiles and using them will find in this interesting group of letters by the ablest men in the world's great industry what may be called a "mental stock-taking," as regards the automobile situation at present.

The first of the letters gives the views of H. H. Bassett, president of the Buick Motor Company. It contains a warning, needed in many cases undoubtedly, but with which many "$50 a week" men will not entirely agree.

Mr. Bassett's views are as follows:

WHERE YOU WANT TO GO.

American progress requires every aid that man has devised for the individual to keep up with competition. The automobile is one of the most important of these aids. It is the only means of transportation so far developed that takes you from where you are to exactly where you want to go. It is a time saver, and time is all-important today.

RECREATION, LOW COST.

It is an important aid to healthful recreation, and its benefits are felt by every member of a family. At low cost, it allows whole families to gratify the inherent desire for travel. It is invaluable as a means for breaking down community and State boundaries. Tourist travel has enabled thousands to become better acquainted with America.

A warning:

The factor to guard against in buying an automobile is the tendency of many to purchase a car at a price beyond their means. Cars are so priced that anyone can well afford to own one, but the fifty-dollar-a-week man has no right to buy a two-thousand-dollar car.

Anyone who is steadily employed and who is living within his means in other respects, should by all means buy an automobile at the price best suited to his income.

As to Mr. Bassett's suggestion that "the $50-a-week man" has no right to buy a $2,000 car, that is unselfish, since Mr. Bassett sells such cars. Perhaps it isn't sound in all cases. If the $50-a-week man has saved $2,000 or is sure that he can pay for such a car on the installment plan, a sound, not an extravagant installment plan, what better investment could he make than a $2,000 car?

It makes him feel like a $100,000 man instead of a $50 man, and, as we feel, so we are. Above all it gives him and his family a hundred thousand dollars' worth of pleasure and happiness. It raises him in the esteem of his neighbors and his employer, providing thrift, the power of self-control and of self-denial.

WHY NOT BUY THE $2,000 CAR?

It might be a good deal better for the $50-a-week man to strain himself a little investing $2,000 in a car rather than "take it easy" and in the long run invest the two thousand dollars in cigarettes, which don't get you anywhere, although they do soothe and save millions that smoke them from doing something harmful.

P. S.—The next letter in this series is written by Mr. F. C. Chandler, president of the Chandler Motor Car Company, of Cleveland, O.

Ticker No Longer Holds the Reins Over Real Business

Shocking as the recent stock market tantrum was to speculators' nerves, it has accomplished a wholesome purpose.

It has demonstrated conclusively and most dramatically to American business that American business is no longer at the mercy of speculation in stocks.

Here was a stock market situation which only a few years ago would have sent shivers down the spines of every borrower, lender, trader and manufacturer between the coasts and started a crimping in production, employment and buying power from which it would have taken the country months, if not years, to recover.

Now productive business watches the turmoil around the ticker and smiles, for it knows its own basis of welfare is sound.

It knows that the credit system is no longer geared to drain its life blood away from production into speculation.

It knows that by going right on attending diligently to its own affairs it can keep the level of business high.

And it knows that when the level of general business is high legitimate investments are not only safe but profitable, however much speculators may at times get stung.

The test of the present organization of credit has been severe; the result is completely convincing. A load of apprehension that for fifty years has overhung our business world like a pall has been lifted and dispersed, with no reason to believe that it need ever return.

There are plenty of times when, at the base of Gibraltar, as you see the fretting waters swish and hear their angry roar, you might imagine that the great rock was in danger. But a bit of perspective shows that it never is.

The productive genius and capacity of 115,000,000 people functioning in the main intelligently on the world's richest resources make for an economic strength like the physical strength of Gibraltar.

The ripples of stock gambling hardly wet a thousandth part of its great surface, much less threaten its stability.

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

A MICHIGAN woman is asking ten thousand dollars damages for a stolen kiss. The guy who took it says she wants $9,876.00 too much.

HE says if he gave her a hundred and twenty-four bucks, he should have change coming.

HE claims he can get all the kisses he wants for eighteen dollars a smack.

HE doesn't even have to pay cash. He can open charge accounts with some of the prettiest girls in the country.

IT'S getting so that a girl with beautiful lips carries a bookkeeper around with her.

BEFORE she'll let you kiss her, you have to talk to her credit department.

A LOT of flappers are selling their lips on the cash and carry plan.

WHY should a fellow pay ten thousand dollars for a little smack when he can go home and kiss his wife all evening for nothing?

THE only thing it costs him is his time.

OF course, if a husband kisses his wife too often, she gets suspicious.

LISTEN, WORLD!

Reg. U. S. Patent Office

By Elsie Robinson

I'm strong for working girls. I'm one myself and naturally I spend any enthusiastic hours in writing ricles which are calculated to plant urels on our marcelled locks and ale in our vanity cases. Neverthess, in spite of my devotion to my ibe, I'm about to hand them a ean one. Let her who can duck.

The subject is USHERETTES. he theme is not original with me. y side-kick, the Dramatic Editor, tarted it.

If ever you've been waved into your seat by a lovely lady with a mean eye here's your chance to see her get here. Says Dud Burrows—

"We're peeved. What's more, no bribe of lollypops from publicity directors or plaster-of-Paris hula girls from orchestra conductors is going to keep us from getting this particular grievance off our chest.

"The sooner the small army of impertinent young misses in this city who think the business of "usheretting" in motion picture houses requires them to assume a "haughty-princess-and-the-mob" attitude toward the paying public—including newspaper critics—is sent back to the gymnasium and hung in its proper place, just under the Indian clubs—the better it will be.

"We'd surely like to have the training of those usherettes for a while—they'd learn politeness or turn in their uniforms."

Cruel words, girls, but you probably have 'em coming to you. I realize that you're picked for beauty and that the poor fish you usher into seats nightly are a lop-sided, bandy-legged, spavin-jointed, cabbage eared, squint-eyed, simple-minded bunch of seconds. But you needn't rub it in.

So, maybe—if it won't be too awfully inconvenient—maybe next time you condescend to officiate at a movie and some of us poor hicks come in looking for a seat—maybe you might kinda overlook the fact that the scavenger omitted to collect us on his rounds. I admit it's asking a good deal and will be a frightful nuisance. But "noblesse oblige," you know, sweetie. Which means that girls like you ought to be a little kinder and more patient with guys that are built like me and the Dramatic Editor.

MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By Helen Rowland

WHAT makes women attractive to men?

* * *

If all the women who have asked that question should be shot at sunrise there wouldn't be a dancing partner left in the world, for the men!

Helen Rowland

I wish I could say, "Beauty, brains and character!"—and let it go at that. Because, a beautiful face, a beautiful mind, a beautiful soul make the Ideal Woman.

* * *

The Ideal Woman that every man worships in his secret dreams—and advises some other man to marry!

* * *

The Ideal Woman, whom a man passes with a charming bow—when he is on his way to call on the "other kind!"

* * *

Not that a man objects to beauty, brains and character, theoretically—but, as a love-charm, there are other qualities SO much more potent!

* * *

Men love a cheerful woman as they do the color red! Cheerfulness is a greater charm than any love-powder or any face-powder that was ever invented. Tears and hopes put out the fire of a man's enthusiasm—but a bright smile draws him out like the sun on a golf course. A man can forgive a woman for anything on earth, except for being miserable!

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

WHAT do you do when the robins go sailing away from this land of snow, sailing away where each lifted wing joys in the bloom of an endless Spring? What do you do when the days are gray, robin and romance flown away? What are the treasures youth leaves behind, braving the Winter and winds unkind? Deep is the gladness a heart can know after youth's singing and sunshine go; turning away from a prospect drear looking within, one can find life dear. Still there are joys for the sombre days, found in life's sober and tranquil ways; calmer than raptures of youth's wild Spring, sweeter, the joys that the gray days bring. Nothing to fear, though the rose is gone; ever and ever new vistas dawn; robins may leave, but hope's roundelay lightens the soul when the days are gray.

Three Minute Journeys

By TEMPLE MANNING

IF there are two occasions in life when rejoicing, seems absolutely expected, it is the day of a wedding and the day of a birth. All the world, it seems, rejoices at the prospect of two people joining their lives in joy and happiness and at the advent into the world of another human being.

But the inhabitants of parts of New Guinea feel otherwise about the matter. These memorable days seem to have no special significance for them. And there is no sign of mourning at a death either.

All of these tribes agree, however, in their supreme contempt for women. To them women are simply slaves and nothing more. A man buys his wife as he would buy any other commodity.

Before his marriage, the man village and after the ceremony he builds a hut on the outskirts of the lives there with his bride for several weeks. Then they return to the village and assume the normal life of the tribe.

One of the strangest phenomena of marriage among the natives of New Guinea is the fact that the bride must demonstrate her condition of abject slavery at the time of her wedding. She must crawl on hands and knees to the home of her lord and master.

"You Said It, Marceline!"

By MARCELINE D'ALROY

ON "ATTENTION, WIVES!"

Sometimes ONE WOMAN believes
That ANOTHER WOMAN has
EVERYTHING she wants
To make her HAPPY.
But it is VERY DOUBTFUL.
STILL, if the FIRST woman
Is IN LOVE
With the SECOND woman's Husband, it is HARD
To convince her
That it is NOT so.
WOMEN should really
Try TO LOVE their OWN husbands, it saves
Such A LOT of fuss
OVER NOTHING.
But women are OBSTINATE
About love. They say
They never TRIED to fall
IN LOVE, so why should
They try TO LOVE when
They have FALLEN OUT?
Well, for that matter,
WHY SHOULD ANYONE

WORK DONE EASILY IS BEST KIND

By DR. FRANK CRANE

IT'S all very well to try, but you never do really great work until you are able to do it without trying.

The finest quality of work is only found in work that is done easily.

All genuine greatness is a kind of play.

It may be very commendable for you to make a tremendous effort to produce music on the violin. But do that in your own room with the door shut. We don't want to hear you until you can play.

Conscious effort spoils art. Mastery is characterized by ease, lightness, grace. We like to see actors play a piece, not work at it.

And the most artistic thing in the world is being good.

It is well to struggle and pray and exert yourself to resist temptation, but that sort of goodness is not pleasant to others.

You are not actually good, and your goodness never takes on an attractive quality until you are just naturally good without trying.

The highest virtue is always unconscious.

The reason why good people are so often disagreeable, why we flee from them, is because they are working at it too hard. But when you meet those who are kind, honest, generous, helpful, dependable and clean, and don't realize it, you feel at once a delightful atmosphere.

Of course it is necessary to pass through the stage of struggle before you can arrive at the high level of mastery. And it is better to wrestle and strive than not to try. But the point is that if you are still in the struggling plane, conceal it, as it is more likely to give offence than to do good.

The egotists are they that have not yet arrived. Says Bishop Bashford:

"Self-consciousness inevitably arises from those achievements which strain our powers. Whenever a man's character and genius are greater than his achievements his deeds will make no impression upon his consciousness; he performs them as unconsciously as the flowers blossom and the birds sing. His achievements are simply the inevitable expressions of his character. On the other hand, whenever a man's achievements strain his ability or his struggle for goodness tests his character to the utmost he is inevitably conscious of such efforts. . . . Egotism characterizes a type which may be called second class great men, while humility characterizes the really great."

FOX-FIRE AND OTHER LIGHT RIDDLES

By Garrett P. Serviss

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest

SINCE early boyhood "fox-fire" has been for me a word with a thrill. Once the thrill was real, a shiver; now it is only a most interesting memory.

In rural legend "fox-fire" was a mysterious light, somehow imparted to ancient stumps and logs by the cunning foxes, or made by nature for the benefit of those red-clad chicken stealers on moonless nights.

Guided by more or less authentic descriptions begged from my elders, I used to search dark, swampy and tangled places in the woods, wherever long-fallen trees, or their decaying stumps, were scattered about, but it was years before I had the triumph of bringing home a few fragments of a rotten, moss-covered stump that actually shone in the dark.

Found It

I had found the famous "fox-fire." In daylight it looked like any other decayed wood. At night it mystically glowed with a cold, greenish-white, inward fire, that I gazed at entranced.

Already the legend was dimmed, like any other wonder when it begins to be explained; but it was many more years before I knew that a mystery deeper than the cunning of foxes hung over this strange light. It was "light without heat," and involved a secret that awakening science was too much puzzled to unlock.

Slowly the situation has been clearing and quite recently "fox-fire" has been made the subject of expert scientific investigation by Drs. Coblentz and Hughes, of the United States Bureau of Standards. The spectroscope has been applied, photographically, to analyze it.

The light, as has long been known, originates not in the dead wood, but in a living fungus which permeates the decaying vegetable substance and possesses the property of emitting light waves that slightly affect the human retina. The investigation shows that this strange light possesses neither the heat waves which extend beyond the red end of the ordinary spectrum of sunlight nor the ultra-violet rays which are found beyond the blue end. But though it may shine bright enough to form a shadow, yet it gives off no sensible heat.

In this respect it resembles other kinds of "light without heat," such as that emitted by glow-worms and fire-flies. Some differences have been found between the spectra of the light of "fox-fire" and that of fireflies and of certain luminous shell-fish.

The remarkable property emitting light is sufficiently wide-scattered in nature to offer a probable explanation for many occult mysteries and very likely for many "ghosts."

Although the light of "fox-fire" is found to contain no ultra-violet waves, yet a concealed bit of decayed wood full of Agaricus melleus, the fungus that makes the glow, might be a valuable adjunct to the cabinet supplies of a "spirit-photographer."

However, it would appear that the complete solution of the mystery is not yet attained. This is not, indeed, the first time that such luminosity has been subjected to spectroscopic examination, that method having been applied by F. W. Very, S. P. Langley and others who obtained results not unlike those more recently reported.

In the Sea

But as most readers know, the great home of mysterious lights, that is to say of lights whose precise nature and origin are still more or less problematical, is the sea, at depths below the range of sunlight.

There the production of illumination seems to be, for many creatures, a physiological function as normal as the assimilation of food. Moreover, the natural mechanics involved in the submarine illuminations incomparably surpass anything of the kind exhibited by light-giving organisms on dry land.

Exteriorly, some of the creatures that swim in the deep gloom of the sea depths bear a startling resemblance to an ocean liner, seen after dark with her rows of portholes alight, where the passengers are preparing to answer the dinner gong.

And a careful dissection of the "electric equipment" of one of these self-lighted creatures of old ocean would show that nature is just as ingenious as man, and has long since employed methods and devices of which he imagined that he was the first inventor.

YOU MAY SOMETIME REGRET LACK OF SYMPATHY

Do you seek much sympathy when you are ill, but extend very little to members of your own family when they are not well?

When they complain you say they "want to avoid work" or that they are "always magnifying little ills."

You think you would stand more than they do before you give up; hence you are heartless. Later you may regret your unkindness.

To be sure there are chronic complainers and those whose imagination runs overtime and certain persons who make more fuss than conditions warrant, but such persons are in the minority.

You appreciate attention and sympathy when you are ill or in pain.

Knowing this, why do you not extend the same courtesy to those who are feeling badly and try to remedy conditions?

Because you are well and strong and can get out in the fresh air you have no patience with the laments of others who want conditions changed and are powerless to do it for themselves.
